Are our volunteers burned out?

By Rebecca Piro

After volunteering for 25 years on the Conservation Commission, Bob Pustell is tired.

"It's burnout, or I don't know what you call it," he says.

As a member of the commission, Pustell says he's not sorry for one minute of the time he's dedicated. But the work sure is a lot harder than it used to be. "It was relatively simple when I first joined in the '70s," he remembers. "Once in a while we would get a late night, but otherwise we would manage to clear up our cases relatively early. But somehow or other, they got a lot more complicated."

"How many nights can I keep devoting when I'm not helping with (my kids') homework?"

FORMER PLANNING BOARD CHAIRMAN MICHAEL MILLER, FATHER OF TWO.

Residents and town officials have long called volunteers the lifeblood of Andover. But as the town has transformed into a bustling, growing community, the volunteers have shouldered more

In eighth grade and into atoms

Eighth-grader S. James Boumil III dreams about becoming a great scientist someday.

Until then, his second place win at the State of Massachusetts Middle School Science Fair is a nice addition to his resume.

"Science is something I've always been into," says the ambitious West Middle School student. "I think that my future holds work in a science, like nuclear physics." He pauses for the layman's sake. "Others might call it particle physics."

Teachers union inks new pact

3% to 5% increases as town approaches override year

By Adam Groff

Calling it "the most progressive process I've ever been involved with," School Committee Chairman – and professional labor arbitrator – Eric Nadworny announced a Memorandum of Agreement between the school administration and the teacher's union Tuesday night.

The agreement comes as town officials are gearing up to garner support for a multi-million-dollar override of Proposition 2½ to pay for operating budgets.

Asked whether next year's budget override request was a concern in the negotiations, School Committee member Gerry Gustus said, "I don't think it's ever really out of anybody's mind. It's part of every decision made by every department and board in town. It's the elephant in the living room."

But he said that foremost on the minds of the

Town wants senior center back in picture

By Neil Fater

Following the failure of the Will Hall senior-center proposal, town officials are going back to the drawing board in earnest.

They plan to invite hundreds of residents who might benefit from a new senior center to attend one of two June meetings and tell the town what they want in a center.

"What we want to do is invite anyone 50 and over," says Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski. "We're asking them, as they look into the future, what do they want, what are the things they want to do, and how can the town help them reach those priorities."

The decision comes after Town Meeting

Web question

Should Andover public schools spend more money on technology?

LAST WEEK'S Townsmen Web-site question was: If the town decides to adopt the Community Preservation Act and the accompanying property tax surcharge of up to 3 percent, which of its three purposes do you think Andover should focus on?

Out of 46 respondents, 14, or 30 percent, said, "I think most of the money should go toward acquiring and preserving open space." Four people said, "I think most of the money should go toward creating more affordable housing," and four more said, "I think most of the money should go toward historic-preservation efforts." More than half, 24 people, voted, "I am opposed to having Andover adopt this act."

THIS WEEK: With a current technology improvement budget of about $290,000 and a postulated need to replace 335 computers a year at a cost of at least $1,000 each, do you think Andover schools should spend more money on technology?

- We cannot afford not to – students must be prepared for today's high-tech society.

- This portion of the school budget should not increase – if we want more computers, parents and students must contribute funds.

- No more budget increases – schools must live within current limits.

- Students don't even need computers – that's what libraries are for.

Jim Shannon to be guest speaker at Andover Chamber's awards breakfast

Officials from Lawrence and Andover should put their heads together today to plan for tomorrow.

That's the message Jim Shannon, vice president of the National Fire Protection Association in Quincy, planned to share with listeners at the Andover Chamber of Commerce breakfast today, Thursday, at 7:30 a.m. at Indian Ridge Country Club on Lovejoy Road in Andover.

"(It's important for) the communities from the (Merrimack Valley) to work together for their economic future — specifically, (on) the importance of Lawrence and Andover to each other," says Shannon.

A former state representative and attorney general, as well as a graduate of Phillips Academy, Shannon says he holds a genuine interest in the continued economic prosperity of the area.

"Andover is an economic powerhouse in a way that it has never been before," says Shannon.

"That's a change from 20 to 30 years ago. Just as decisions made 30 years ago chartered the course for Andover's current prosperity, decisions today will have a big impact 10 or 20 years from now."

Shannon served as attorney general from 1987 to 1991. He headed a department of 450 people including 175 attorneys and revamped the office to emphasize prosecution of white-collar crime, public corruption and narcotics cases.

The Annual Service Award Breakfast was held at 7:30 a.m. at the Indian Ridge Country Club on Lovejoy Road. Shannon was invited to speak at the breakfast after US Congressman Marty Meehan canceled his appearance.

Community Service Award winners will include high-school students who will be presented with college scholarships, and Joanne Marden of Andover, this year's winner for distinguished community service.

With Will Hall shot down, seniors' gift shop closes down

The Friends' Gift Shop at 24 Park St. closed at the end of last month after being open for five years. Store manager Rita Carrier said that it was set up by the Friends of the Senior Center in 1996 to raise community awareness of active seniors and their need for a new senior center. Carrier said that the store has done its job, but not well enough to secure passage of the Will Hall article at April's Town Meeting.

"We didn't feel that we should put any more money into running it," said Carrier, "because we're not having very much luck raising money for (a new senior center). (The gift shop) was a project we felt very strongly about, but now we don't know what the future holds, and so we decided to conserve our energies and not pursue it anymore."

Carrier said the store sold donated items as well as consignment goods such as hats and mittens knitted by local seniors. She said that 20 to 25 senior women volunteered their time to run the store.

"Without that store," said Carrier, "we would be just where we were eight or 10 years ago, with people just knocking around the idea of a senior center. Now people are aware, and there's discussion still going on. We can't accomplish any more except for the town to help us get a new senior center."

AYF: Forget community center

For now, group wants focus on youth center

By Neil Fater

Members of the private Andover Youth Foundation — the group planning to build a youth center — say they've heard people talking about how Andover should build a community center instead. But they say that's all it is — talk.

"There's no initiative by the town to do that. It's not on the selectmen's list or anyone else's. How realistic is it? To my mind it isn't," says Bill Fahey, youth services director. "If it's something the town manager wants to see, the selectmen want to see, then they should start an initiative."

Otherwise, the foundation members are calling for townspeople to refocus any wayward attention on the youth-center effort.

"The time has come. It's an issue that's been on and off the table for 20-plus years," says Fahey.

While Fahey and other AYF members argue that the town does not plan to fund a community center, Andover has included a plan in its five-year Capital Improvement Plan for a $4.9 million "community recreation center" at Recreation Park.

However, items often stay on this list for years without action, and this community recreation center has not been given any type of priority ranking.

"I think the status of a community center right now, in my eyes, is not very high, mostly because the youth foundation is going strong. I don't want to get in the way and the selectmen don't want to get in the way. Anything to muddy the water, we want to stay away from," says Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski. "It's not on the horizon."

Stapczynski says the community recreation center in the CIP is "a concept that's out there that, I suppose, if all else fails, it's at least on the list. I didn't place it on a high priority."

AYF members also say that no private group has offered to spearhead such an effort. And certainly, no millionaire has come forward to offer to pay for a community-center complex in West Andover.

"No one's come to us about it," says Larry Larsen, AYF member and former selectman, who says he hears about the community-center idea frequently. "I have very strong feelings that our calling is to build a youth center — unequivocally. And we're well down the pike."

The Andover Youth Foundation was granted permission at a Special Town Meeting in the fall to begin raising $4 million to build a youth center on town land near the West Andover fire station, off Ledge Road. AYF will raise all the money privately, build the facility and then give the youth center to the town. Taxpayers will be responsible for the cost of its annual maintenance and operation.

The group says they are building the youth center so that it can be part of a community-center complex in West Andover. For instance, the building will not be in the center of the six-acre lot, leaving room for more buildings.

"The architect that we've hired has built community centers all over the Commonwealth," says Larsen.

"But right now, it's a little premature to say it's going to be a community complex," says Fahey. "If it comes from the top, then we're all for it. But what we're hearing is, fiscal times are tough."

"I'd like the seniors to get the space they need. I'd like the community members to get the space they need," says Fahey. "But the prize for us is to get this youth center built."

AYF members say the desire in town for a youth center is obvious, as evidenced by the overwhelming Special Town Meeting vote and the number of youth who participate in youth services programs.

AYF member Peg Campbell says that when she worked for the town's Department of Community Services, they had trouble planning popular programs for the town's teens.

"Now people stand in line for

refused to grant a private seniors group $2 million for its senior-center plan, which involved leasing and renovating a Phillips Academy building that the town would never own. Since that vote, a downtown store run by seniors — and meant to drum up support for a new center — has closed (see related story, page 3).

Stapczynski wants the meetings, currently scheduled for Monday morning, June 25, and Tuesday evening, June 26, to help set "the future direction for the development of a senior center."

Forced community service may soon end

It looks like the issue of whether community service at Andover High School is mandatory or voluntary is actually all up to Principal Peter Anderson. Anderson and several members of the high school community service program went before the School Committee on May 8 to suggest that the program either needs to be voluntary, or new personnel need to be hired to keep records for the graduation requirement.

Community service was made into a requirement when Principal Larry Robinson included it in a package of increased graduation requirements that he submitted to and had approved by the School Committee in 1999. At its May 8 meeting, the committee said it would go back and see what procedure would need to be followed to undo the community service part of the requirement.

At Tuesday night's meeting, however, Assistant Superintendent Marinel McGrath said she had discovered that while Robinson's recommendation was approved by the committee in 1999, due to an administrative oversight it was never actually made a part of official School Committee policy. Therefore, the new requirements, which have been set to take effect beginning with the class of 2003, have only been in force by virtue of the School Committee's approving the high school student handbook as submitted by the principal. The School Committee will now make the new graduation requirements official, with or without the community service program, depending on what Anderson recommends.

He said he would rely on the committee he has formed to look into the matter, a body he says is currently clearly in favor of voluntary community service.

Andover companies buying, selling, closing

International corporations predict a busy summer for their Andover facilities.

Agilent Technologies, a worldwide communications and healthcare corporation, has completed a sale with Royal Philips Electronics. Agilent will discontinue its Healthcare Solutions Group, located in Andover. Royal Philips agreed to purchase HSG for $1.7 billion months ago, but the Department of Justice just recently completed an antitrust hearing to approve the deal.

Celestica, a global electronics manufacturer with a site in Andover, will absorb two companies. SAGEM SA, an international technology group based in Kladno, Czech Republic; and Primetech, another electronics manufacturing company based in Quebec, Canada, have agreed to acquisitions by Celestica.

The strategic agreements will widen Celestica's presence overseas, said company representatives.

Alcatel, an international computer networking company, will "consolidate" its North American operations to reduce costs. Its Andover site will be included in the consolidations.

New three-year teachers contract

TEACHERS CONTRACT

participants was not the override, but the shared goals of improving student achievement, recruiting and retaining the best teachers, and increasing community support for schools.

The new agreement is the culmination of almost a year of "interest-based bargaining," or IBB, a consensus-based bargaining method championed by Superintendent Claudia Bach.

Balancing an 11.8-percent salary increase over three years with reductions in incentives for early retirement, Bach said that the agreement shows that "you really can expand the pie."

An unusual aspect of the agreement is its provision that the bargaining teams should remain intact and meet at least twice a year over the life of the contract "to determine whether any issues or changes have arisen that should be addressed by the IBB team."

"I think the issue is that a contract is a living agreement," said Andover Education Association president Tom Meyers, "and the reality is that a number of factors need to be addressed that we didn't get to. There are a number of issues around transferring teachers to the new schools, planning time for elementary teachers, and state regulations that are constantly being altered." The AEA approved the memorandum last week.

"Working it through the IBB process is a whole new way of approaching contracts," said Gustus. He said that previous contract negotiations have reached a point of deadlock where both sides agreed on what they could and then parted ways until the next contract came up. "If we keep saying, 'Here's the money, see you in three years,' you never resolve these other issues," said Gustus.

At the meeting, Nadworny said that the yearly raises, and presumably the reduced incentives for early retirement, are "important in order to address the steep increase in the number of retirements coming up in the next few years and the growing competition from neighboring towns for good young teachers."

According to Gustus, 50 percent of Andover teachers are at a "Step 14" pay level, meaning they have worked in Andover schools for 14 years or more. Teachers are eligible for retirement after 20 years, meaning that, although many will not take that route, half the system's teaching staff are in a position to leave within six years.

"We're looking, as every community is, at a big movement on that end," said Gustus, "while there seems to be a real slowdown in people choosing teaching as a vocation."

To try to stay competitive in a tight labor market, School Committee members said, they approved teacher salary increases of 3.7, 3.1, and 5 percent over the next three years respectively. The dip in the second year, 2002, is intended to help the community absorb the cost of opening the new elementary and middle schools.

The bargaining teams, consisting of the School Committee and members of the administration on one side, and Meyers and five other teachers on the other, have worked through the IBB process for almost a year, with Bach, a long-time advocate of the process, as one of the facilitators. She said the process is based on getting both sides to look deeply and in great detail at school issues with an eye toward common goals, rather than fixating on separate positions.

"I'm still in awe of how fine a process this can really be," said Bach.

Meyers called it the "least adversarial and most work-intensive" contract process that he has seen out of the four bargaining teams he has been on.

Boumil has more than dabbled in that dream — he has spent the last five months working on an experiment designed to determine the charge of an electron. He built the experiment according to the specifications of 1920s scientist Robert Millikan, who invented the "Millikan Oil Drop Experiment."

"The first thing you do is build a chamber that is free of air currents," says Boumil. "Then you drill a hole in the side of it and spray an atomized oil mist into the chamber."

Boumil studied the oil's behavior through a microscope and calculated his data in several math equations. The result was just what he was hoping for.

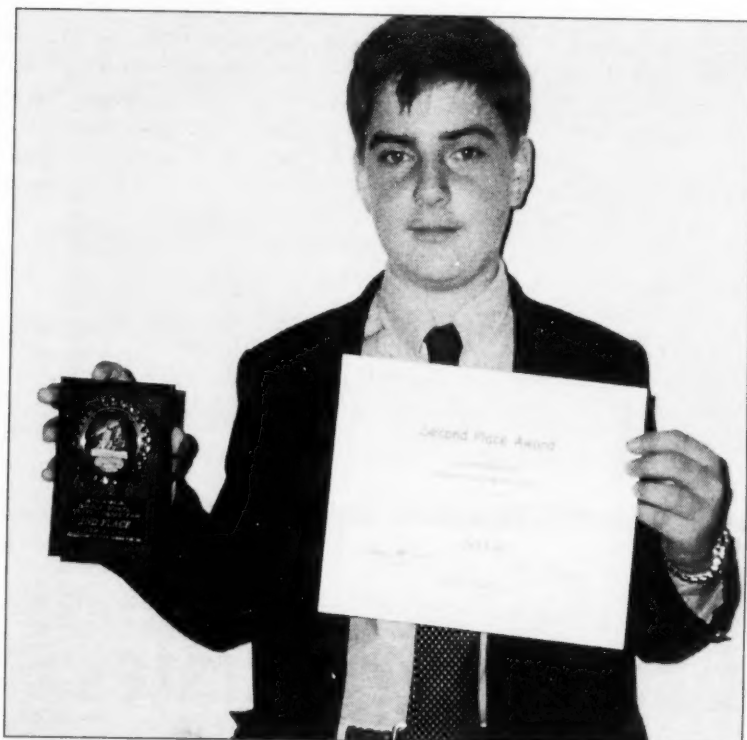

"The charge is 1.67 coulombs," he says simply. "It's a measurement of electrostatic units."

That result is the same that other scientists have found through various replications of Millikan's experiment. Landing on the right number was wonderful, Boumil says. "I felt success."

Boumil's science teacher, Todd Fawcett, nominated Boumil for a place at the state competition, held Saturday at Worcester State College. The judges awarded Boumil with second-place honors, distinguishing him from the 166 other middle-school students competing.

Almost more exciting than the win was the opportunity to meet the president of MIT, says Boumil.

Good signs for Andover youth, senior centers

WHEN YOUTH-CENTER supporters went to Town Meeting in 1995 to get a youth center built, town officials provided little leadership to the group — made up largely of high-school students — and the project failed by fewer than 70 votes.

Town officials also left the private group Friends of Andover Seniors largely on its own as it pursued the idea of turning Will Hall into a senior center. That project also failed, though not until years were spent in the effort.

So it's an encouraging sign that the Board of Selectmen and the town manager will host two events aimed at asking residents 50 and older what they want from the town. Selectmen Chairwoman Mary French says the talks aren't just about building a senior center. "It's to talk about what seniors want. It's broader than a senior center," she says.

But the answers — and the town's involvement in such a gathering — can only bode well for Andover pursuing a senior-center project that residents and a future Town Meeting will support.

As for a youth center, the town seems to be providing support to the Andover Youth Foundation simply by staying out of the way. The foundation includes former selectmen, fundraisers, a public works director and a planning board chairman from the town, so relying on AYF to build a youth center is a realistic plan.

Taken together, these two stories should give residents the most positive indication in years that Andover may build a youth and senior center.

Andover student: MCAS didn't test American history — and it should

Editor, Townsmen:

There comes a time in our lives as students when we are put through tests. Academic, athletic or whatever, they are all tests. Over the past few weeks, I, along with the entire class of 2003 (minus a few "conscientious objectors"), took part in our Commonwealth's newest way of making sure everything is fair and happy in the school systems, the MCAS exam. I had no problem with the English and math sessions. They are life skills and necessary for any profession. On Tuesday, May 22, I took the final test, history and social science. On Tuesday, May 22, I was perturbed. Normally, history is my favorite subject. I enjoy the politics and economics and how they dictate what happens in our world. But, mostly, I love US history. And this subject that I love, that I feel to be the most important history course taught in American schools, was not on the test. Instead, we high school sophomores were tested on civilizations that have been extinct for centuries, if not millennia. Has this nation, or at least Massachusetts, gotten so wrapped up in political correctness that we can't teach our own history for fear of offending someone? Well, if that is the way it is, I am offended. Teaching people about the Aztecs and the Incas will not help them become productive members of American society. Teaching them about the politics, economics and sociology of their own country will. If we teach Americans about the mistakes made by prior Americans, maybe they'll learn and not make the same mistakes again.

Our nation has a great history. In less than 250 years, we have gone from being a colony, completely dependent on another nation for the preservation of our existence, to the world power.

COMPILED BY REBECCA PIRO

Other nations that have held the throne of responsibility and power that we now hold had been around for centuries. It took Britain more than 700 years to fully and completely "rule the seas," plus another 100 to be the supreme imperial power. We must have done something right. For some reason, the United States had what it took to rise above the rest, to put aside our internal quarrels and conflicts and work toward the greatness we have achieved.

I'm not saying that we shouldn't teach World History in public schools. I'm just saying that we need greater emphasis placed on the history of who we are as a nation and how we got here. A lot of people have fought and many have died to give us the chance to live the way we do, free from fear and oppression. If for no other reason, we should teach American history out of our debt and to honor those who have made the greatest sacrifice imaginable. We should show that what they went through was not in vain, that we, as a people, are thankful to them for their service, sacrifice and commitment to this country. Shouldn't we all pay that small token of gratitude?

Ed reform helped fire band leader

Editor, Townsmen:

It has been wonderful to see how the community has responded to the firing of Brandon Psenicka. It is rare to see students and parents rally to try to save a dedicated teacher's position. It seems so simple... fighting to keep a talented musician with a gift for reaching young people in our school system. To paraphrase Charlie Brown, how can we lose when we're so sincere? The answer is education reform (with thanks to John Silber). From the wonderful people who brought us the MCAS (you know, those artificial scores that keep your real-estate values high and your children anxious) we have the new, improved teacher certification exams — one size fits all! Try to pass today! — and, as we are realizing, little to no recourse or say in the hiring and firing of teachers, because those are now functions of the school administration.

We, as parents and taxpayers, can vote for members to serve on the School Committee, but the School Committee members, dedicated and sincere as they may be, aren't able to help us in a situation like Mr. Psenicka's. The school administration is removed from the democratic process of vote and

Sweepstakes prize for losing tickets proven to be a winner

Editor, Townsmen:

Cleaning up our environment has long been one of my most important priorities. Sometimes small ideas on cleaning up the environment can make a big difference.

Like many of you, I have long detested the scattered piles of discarded instant lottery tickets that litter the front of every convenience store and liquor store in our area. After listening to many complaints from storeowners and nearby neighbors, I sponsored legislation to set up a "second-chance" mechanism for redeeming used lottery tickets.

State Treasurer Shannon O'Brien shared a similar vision and recently implemented a second-chance drawing. Known as the Clean Fun Sweepstakes, the results have been remarkable. The area surrounding nearly every convenience store and liquor store has become significantly cleaner.

Many of you may recall how parking lots and sidewalks used to look before the Bottle Bill was passed (the law placed a five-cent return deposit on most bottles and cans.) Thus far, this new, second-chance drawing for discarded instant lottery tickets has made a similar impact on making our communities cleaner.

Regardless of how big or small the idea, I am always interested in listening to new ideas from local residents about how to improve our environment. If residents have such an idea, they can contact me at my office at 617-722-1612 or e-mail me at <stucker@senate.state.ma.us>.

popular opinion... sort of like the Electoral College. You can "vote" but your vote doesn't really count. The administration decides what your vote means, or just ignores it. It doesn't sound democratic, it doesn't sound fair... it just sounds like internal school department politics to me.

Brandon Psenicka generated enthusiasm and excitement in the middle- and high-school bands, which was something that had been lacking for several years. Was his downfall a failure to play the political games? Could it be that he was too busy actually working with kids to bother playing the game?

School is a funny system. When you're a student, you're taught that the most important thing — the right thing — is to work hard and you will be rewarded with recognition, grades, privileges and scholarships. But if you decide to reenter the system as a teacher, hard work and doing the right thing isn't as important as playing the game. My best friend's mother was a teacher for many years and it was watching her play the game that made me decide not to teach. I didn't have the patience for it then, and I don't now.

What's the moral here? You can be a good man, try to do the right things and still lose your job? You can be superintendent or curriculum coordinator and not have to listen to the people who pay your (rather large) salary? There's a lesson here and it's one our children are paying a high price to learn.

More on Psenicka

Editor, Townsmen:

To Diana Kolben:

I have just returned home from what, as usual, was an exceptional concert put on by the high school music department — with, by my count, more than 10 percent of the student body performing in one capacity or another. I regret that I saw neither you, nor any of your colleagues, members of the administration or the School Committee. Principal Peter Anderson was there for part of the concert; I didn't see him at the end.

I am concerned about a couple of things:

1) I would think that, given the quality of the performances, there would be more people in attendance and therefore I wonder, as usual, why I recall having seen no announcements or publicity. Shouldn't your office make sure that your colleagues and the local newspapers, at least, get notice of such events?

2) Although I no longer have any children in the system, I have continued to have some involvement with the band. I enjoyed this evening as I have others during Brandon Psenicka's leadership over the past two years across the system, and these performances have shown considerable evidence that the exceptional performances of the jazz and concert bands were the result of an exceptional teacher. Therefore: Why have him leave? And will you reconsider?

It is my impression that if there is no change in the present decision, the future will note to Andover's discredit that our record is blemished by our treatment of a talented teacher who has accomplished and given much somewhere else. My support for Andover's schools remains strong, as reflected by my comments at Town Meeting, and it pains me strongly to see such occurrences. I look forward to an explanation for something I cannot understand, and which, despite my continued close association with the schools and especially the performing arts programs, I heard no whisper of concern about from any quarter until I saw it in the newspaper.

Essex Orchestra deserves support

Editor, Townsmen:

I am writing to commend the Essex Symphony Orchestra for its wonderful performance on Friday, May 18. The performers excited an audience of wide musical tastes with their renditions of Ravel, Copland, and many more. I think it is fantastic to have such a quality organization enhancing the culture of the Merrimack Valley.

However, the ESO is an organization highly dependent on volunteers and the active enthusiasm of players, family, friends and fans. More individuals would benefit from lending a helping hand to the orchestra. The most worthwhile events are those to which people from all over our region have dedicated time and effort.

Finegold prepares run for US seat, upsetting some Dems

By Rebecca Piro

State Rep. Barry Finegold took another step toward running for US Congress on Monday by filing papers to open a federal campaign committee for a potential run.

By doing so, Finegold doesn't believe that he also stepped on the toes of fellow Democrat and incumbent US Congressman Marty Meehan. In fact, he says he called Meehan before he took out the papers, and simply sees the move as necessary if he is to win the seat.

However, some Meehan supporters are bothered by what they consider to be Finegold's breach of etiquette, says Bob LaRoche, a political consultant and Meehan's former district director.

LaRoche is now president of Andover Strategic Alliances at 1 Elm Square.

"There's a protocol that needs to be followed, and Barry has stepped outside of the line," he says.

Marty Meehan was unavailable for comment Tuesday.

Finegold has promised that he won't announce his candidacy for Congressman until September — and only after Meehan decides whether to run for governor. If Meehan opts not to join the gubernatorial race, Finegold says he won't challenge the incumbent for the 5th District seat.

"I'm not going to run against him, so I don't see what the problem is," Finegold says. "I'm waiting on Marty Meehan, who will make a decision in September. If he runs (for governor), OK. If not, I'll probably run for reelection for state rep. I'm just trying to get myself in position in case (the Congressional seat) opens up."

That decision, however, could cost Finegold important votes from town Democrats, says LaRoche. "Marty Meehan has done very well in Andover and he's worked very hard for the community," he says, adding that several offended locals called him Tuesday to voice their displeasure with Finegold. "A lot of people today are shaking their heads."

Phone call

Finegold says he spoke with Meehan prior to filing papers, and Meehan did not express any problems with his decision. When Meehan ran for the seat, he opposed incumbent Chet Atkins in the Democratic primary.

But LaRoche, who has not spoken with Meehan regarding his conversation with Finegold, says the call does not excuse Finegold's actions.

"Protocol in this situation would be to wait until the Congressman has announced that he's running for another office," says LaRoche. "Marty has been very clear throughout the last several months about when he will be making a decision. Everybody knows what the time line is."

But time is exactly the reason Finegold has gotten a head start, according to the representative.

"My whole life I've always had to work a little harder to get where I am, and that's all I'm doing here," says Finegold. "I want to sit down with as many people as I can. To do that, I feel I need to start now with this campaign." Though Meehan has stated that he will wait several months until he makes his decision, Finegold believes the congressman has indicated through his actions and words that his candidacy is a sure thing.

"I have not had one phone call from anyone who is upset about it," Finegold says.

Technology wanted in the schools, but at what cost?

By Adam Groff

School Committee members were wowed Tuesday night as students from South Elementary and Doherty and West Middle schools gave PowerPoint presentations on fractions, the structure of a cell, and the status of women in ancient Rome. They were equally wowed by the numbers Technology Coordinator Ray Tode put forth as the cost of simply maintaining Andover's current stock of school computer equipment.

The presentations in PowerPoint - essentially a computer slideshow application that combines graphics, text, and a bit of animation - were part of a report on the district's laptop pilot program given by Tode and about a dozen participating administrators, teachers, and students. For the program, 120 laptops were purchased this year and 40 were issued to each of the two middle schools and South Elementary. Ten teachers in each school received a laptop for their personal use at home and in school, and 30 computers in each school were bundled into "mobile wireless computer labs" that teachers could sign out for use in their classes.

"It's been a wonderful resource," said fifth-grade teacher Steve Zrike to the committee. "I felt that the level of students' work, especially their writing, improved. The kids were so excited about being on them."

The other four teachers present gave equally positive accounts, telling of self-grading quizzes, and class Web sites that enabled students, and their parents, to check their assignments online, and e-mail the teacher with questions and comments.

"We didn't have to stop work when we didn't know something," said one student of having computers on their desks for research. "We just looked it up on the Internet."

Then came the grim side of the story. Tode told the committee that there are currently 1,675 computers in Andover schools, 705 printers, and 623 stand-alone monitors.

With a friend like this...

After biding time, man stings friend for turning 60

By Rebecca Piro

Some aging people would prefer to forget about birthdays altogether. But Dick Jensen's neighbor won't let him do that.

In fact, Doug Stephens is making sure the whole town of Andover knows that his buddy is 60 years old this week. That's why he placed an ad in the Townsmen that reads, "Congratulations to Dick Jensen, Andover's newest senior citizen."

"I've been thinking for almost two years what I could do," laughs Stephens, a resident of Enfield Drive.

But the birthday gags go way back before then.

"Back when I turned 45, Dick sent me a sympathy card, which I thought was hilarious," says Stephens. "Since I happen to be a few years older, I thought I'd bide my time and wait to get back at him." Stephens ordered a funeral spray of flowers and had it delivered to his friend's driveway in time for Jensen's 45th birthday. But it didn't stop there.

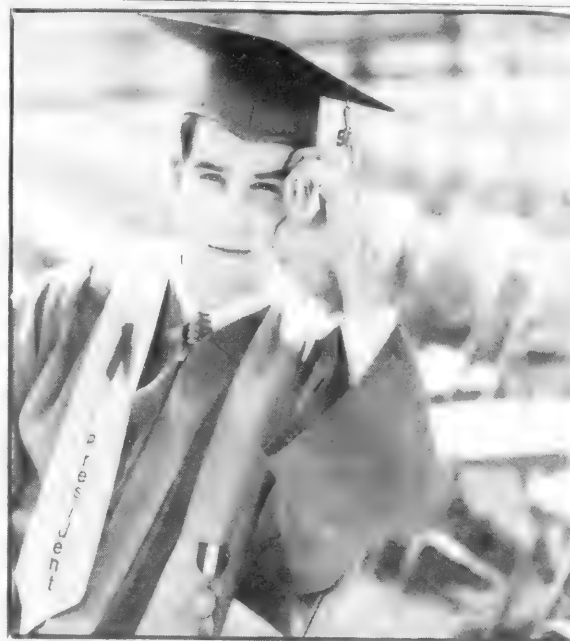

"I turned 60 two years ago. I got up in the morning and I went out to get the paper," recalls Stephens. "I saw what looked like the back of a highway street sign... and it had a graphic of a man with a cane. It read 'Caution, senior citizen.' We had a great laugh over that."

Stephens decided that an announcement in the Townsmen was the perfect way to return the favor to his best friend. "It will be interesting to see his reaction," he says. "It should be good for a few smiles."

How will Stephens top the next milestone?

"I figured I'd leave the airplane flying around with a banner for next time," he says.

I was fortunate to be elected junior and senior class president at my high school as the openly gay, bisexual male. In order to achieve this, I worked hard to show people the positive aspects of my personality. I demonstrated my enthusiasm, education and responsibility to the highest degree. This showed my classmates that I was multifaceted and that being gay was just one of my positive qualities. Most of my friends have a positive attitude about my sexuality and were not surprised when I confirmed their suspicions. My parents, on the other hand, were shocked through a phone call. They suggested that I am confused or going through a phase. They have learned that if I confirm my sexuality as anything other than heterosexual, I will be dismissed.

Stephens age 18

Andover High will host a photographic exhibition on gay and bisexual young people.

Exhibition at AHS addresses gay youths

Photos, stories feature positive image

By Adam Groff

Deborah Burch wants Andover High School to be a safer place for students with alternative sexual orientations. That's why the Gay/Straight Alliance advisor is pleased that the school is hosting a five-day photographic exhibition next week called "The Shared Heart," which features positive images of gay, lesbian, and bisexual young people.

"We agree that people have a right to their own opinion," says Burch of the GSA, "but we feel that in society as a whole, GLBT (gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgendered) people are treated differently and put down. When it comes to young people, they tend to bear the brunt of the name-calling and the physical aggression."

DEBORAH BURCH, TEACHER AND GSA ADVISOR AT ANDOVER HIGH SCHOOL

And she says that mild-mannered Andover is not above these social biases.

"Thankfully, here in Andover we've had no problem with physical attacks," she says. "but we have had name-calling, and last year we had a threat against a GSA member and his family. It's not a comfortable or safe environment for kids who are different."

Burch, herself a lesbian, and a GSA advisor for the past five years, says perhaps three to five AHS students attend GSA meetings faithfully each week. She says some straight students attend because they want to express support for gay friends or relatives. Gay or lesbian students come, she says, because "they feel that they're making a statement about their identity." In addition, there are from 10 to 12 "satellite students," as she calls them - students who are connected to the organization but who may not feel comfortable going to meetings, or whose parents won't let

As town grows, so do demands on volunteer officials

■ WORKING HARD

and more of the work that comes with it. That means longer and longer hours for Pustell and the other members of the town's many volunteer boards — who work late-night hours, long after the work day is over, and without compensation. Such hours may finally be taking their toll.

Dan Casper, chairman of the Zoning Board of Appeals, laid the problem in the laps of the Town Government Review Committee two weeks ago. He said that developers have slammed the ZBA with applications for comprehensive permits — permits for residential developments that include affordable housing — and the applications are coming in faster than the board members can hear them.

"I've been having people say, 'I'm burned out,'" Casper told the committee. His suggestion for a solution? "I would not be adverse to having a couple more members."

Selectmen Chairwoman Mary French says she's willing to discuss solutions, if burnout is truly a growing problem. "We have a lot of volunteers who work terribly hard," she says. "I'm sure people do get tired, but I wasn't aware of that as a board or committee problem."

Regardless, French says volunteers are important enough that officials should take action, if need be. "The strength of town government... in Andover really rests on volunteers," she says.

Selectman John Hess agrees. "We are the kind of town we are, because people participate," he says. Hess has pushed for more public volunteer recognition, something he thinks is important to make volunteers feel appreciated. "There's a tremendous amount of work that these volunteers do. A lot of it is behind the scenes, and that's why I've been pushing (public recognition)," he says. "But I also know that recognition doesn't make the load any lighter."

Hess wants to investigate how other towns balance the work load among their volunteers. There are plenty of communities that are growing faster than Andover, and must find ways to cope, he says.

But Paul Salafia, Planning Board chairman, says Andover's workload is nothing its volunteers can't handle. "Volunteers on our board stay many, many years," he says. "If they were burned out they wouldn't do it."

Salafia has volunteered on the board for close to nine years. That's nine years of semi-monthly meetings that start around 7:30 p.m. and can last until 10, 11, 12 — even 1 a.m. "We squawk about our time commitment, but if it was really bugging us all, we'd leave," he says.

In fact, one member of the board did leave recently. Michael Miller chaired his last Planning Board meeting one month ago, ending his nearly 10-year tenure with the board.

"A lot of it is the burdens and strain it puts on your family," says Miller, husband and father of two. "How many nights can I keep devoting when I'm not helping with homework, and I'm not where I'm needed?"

The long hours with the Planning Board convinced Miller to turn his time elsewhere — to the Andover Youth Foundation, where he could work to build a youth center for kids, and still make time to spend with his own.

"You start having to have extra meetings because the agendas are so full," Miller remembers. "We're getting closer to build-out, and therefore the sites are a lot tougher to deal with and the issues are more complex."

Salafia has noticed the change, but says it hasn't deterred him — or any of the other members, as far as he can tell. But he acknowledges that because developers already have eaten up choice plots of land in Andover, builders are now eyeing tighter, smaller, less desirable parcels, which makes the Planning Board's job more difficult.

"We don't get anything that's a slam-dunk anymore," Salafia says. "Now with everything, 50 people show up for (the hearing). If you do get burned out at all, it's on these very challenging projects."

The board is currently working on ways to "streamline" the hearings, "so that we don't have to stay there until midnight every night," he says. "I think that will help the board feel more comfortable being there."

Will that help to persuade longtime board members to stick around a while longer? Hess hopes so. "Their experience is very valuable," he says, contemplating the town's potential loss if veteran volunteers were to give up the ship. "If we don't have people volunteering, then we can't continue the quality."

Assault at state forest

A 28-year-old Billerica woman told police she was assaulted early Wednesday by a friend at Camp Lorraine in Harold Parker State Forest.

It was around midnight when the female roused a fellow camper in search of help, claiming her boyfriend's friend had assaulted her, said Lt. Thomas Siopes.

The suspect, a 35-year-old male from Wilmington, drove off in a black vehicle after first allegedly attempting to fondle her, and then striking her in the face, she said.

The incident is under investigation, said Siopes. Police are currently seeking a warrant for the male's arrest.

Burch defines "transgendered" as "a large, inclusive term for anyone who feels that they do not identify in their emotions and how they dress and how they act with members of their biological sex," or whose biological sex may be ambiguous.

Burch says that on a number of occasions she has had students reveal their homosexuality to her for the first time. Sometimes they are sent to her from the guidance office, or referred by a friend.

"Most of the kids who come out publicly find that things are easier after that," she says, "but making that transition takes a tremendous amount of personal strength."

Especially, she says, when they do not have the support of family and friends.

"To be honest, as a GSA advisor, I'm never going to counsel a student to come out when it's not safe for them," she says. "On rare occasion I've counseled students not to come out until they can move out of their house and become financially independent."

She says she hopes next week's activities will help some students feel more comfortable with their sexuality. The first night of "The Shared Heart" exhibition will be marked by a community forum called "Creating Safe and Supportive Communities for Our Youth." The keynote speaker will be State Representative David Torrisi of North Andover, and there will be a panel of speakers featuring Andover child psychologist Larry Larsen, Andover schools Health Coordinator Dave Nichols, students from Andover's GSA, students from Greater Lowell Technical School's GSA, and representatives of faith communities, law enforcement, and business from around the Merrimack Valley.

Burch hopes that the forum will not draw agitators from either pro- or anti-gay camps.

"We want people to come to help kids, not to try to push a personal agenda," says Burch. "The point of the night is to try to accomplish something positive."

Monday night's forum will run from 7 to 9 p.m., and it, as well as the photographic exhibit, are free and open to the public. "The Shared Heart" will be in the high school library from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Friday, June 11 through 15.

The exhibit is coordinated by Greater Boston Parents, Families and Friends of Lesbians and Gays (PFLAG). For further information, call PFLAG at 978-686-6185 or the Samaritans of the Merrimack Valley (another event sponsor) at 978-562-0792.

Computers in the schools

■ TECHNOLOGY

He said that assuming a five-year equipment replacement cycle - a dog's age in computer years - the district would need to replace 335 computers a year, at a likely cost of well over $1,000 each, and 141 printers. Combine that with needed infrastructure improvements like upgrades to the district's security firewall, upgrades to its proxy server (which links the district to the Internet), increased bandwidth to accommodate faster machines, and operating system upgrades, and the technology capital improvement budget of $292,800 is well past broken, said Tode.

Tode said that his goal for the district would be a laptop for every student, to be used in school and at home. But he pointed out that comedian and Andover graduate Jay Leno's 1998 gift of $250,000-worth of software bought 386 copies of the Microsoft Office software suite (which includes word processing, spreadsheet, database, and PowerPoint applications) - enough for just under a quarter of the district's current inventory of computers.

"When we do our budgeting for next year," Tode told the committee, "we have to address technology."

"This is a wonderful program, and how could we not support you," said School Committee member Dick Collins regarding the laptop initiative. "But I can tell you exactly the reaction we're going to get: if we want to spend more money on technology, we'll have to cut something else."

"I will support it wholeheartedly," said committee member Gerry Gustus, "but I'll tell you, I'd like to see this stuff at my company. The community does need to know that it is an extremely expensive endeavor, but it is not one we can shrink from."

"We need to ask, can parents enter into a partnership with the schools," said Superintendent Claudia Bach, referring to the lease-to-own option that is currently being planned for next year at South. "Because we know absolutely that budgets can't do it all."

programs and want more and more," she says. "I think this is a way to make it happen and fulfill a promise to young people and not be a burden on the town."

"The town needs to look at the issue of space. We've been working out of 600 square feet since 1994," says Fahey.

Steve Jankauskas named principal at Sanborn School Interim principal beats six semifinalists

By Adam Groff

On July 1, Sanborn Elementary Interim Principal Stephen Jankauskas will drop the "interim" from his title.

Jankauskas, a 31-year veteran of the Andover public schools, was chosen by a search committee from among six semifinalists to recommend to Superintendent Claudia Bach for the position. Jankauskas has been interim principal for the past school year while Principal Jade Reitman was on a leave of absence. At the end of March, Reitman tendered her resignation, citing a desire to spend more time with her family.

"There is lots to do, but we expect our population to shrink with the opening of the new schools..."

STEPHEN JANKAUSKAS, INTERIM PRINCIPAL OF
SANBORN SCHOOL

"Sanborn has always been known as an excellent school," said Jankauskas, "and our overriding goal is to remain worthy of that recognition."

Jankauskas was hired in Andover in 1970, following his graduation from Boston College, to teach special education in grades four through six at West Elementary. From there he became the special-education supervisor at West El. and then the head of the special-education core-evaluation team for all the elementary schools and, eventually, for the entire district. From 1980 to 1984, he was the president of the Andover Education Association, the district's teachers union.

In 1984, Jankauskas joined the staff of South Elementary School as a fourth-grade, regular-education classroom teacher, and in 1998 he became South's first assistant principal.

Jankauskas said he has been consulting with parents, teachers, and students about the direction in which Sanborn needs to go.

"Before I tell you what my goals are, I guess we need to know how the Sanborn community thinks we're doing," he said. "Then we can set some goals."

Jankauskas said he has sent out a needs-assessment survey to both parents and teachers, and he has been meeting with students in focus groups to hear their opinions about the school. He said student focus groups are a routine practice of his principal mentor, Eileen Woods of South School.

"The typical kinds of things," was how he described student complaints - crowded playgrounds, short lunch periods, and increased homework - at least the first two of which he said will be alleviated by the redistricting that will happen in 2002. On the whole, he said student input is positive.

"There is lots to do, but we expect our population to shrink with the opening of the new schools and make this a much more comfortable place," he said.

Students learn to give

During the school year, the Sanborn Student Council has been involved in many charity programs. Earlier this spring, the Sanborn student council held a drive for used eyeglasses and just last week, the group donated 468 pairs of gently worn frames to the Lowell Association for the Blind.

"We are very proud of these students for putting such a remarkable effort together and doing something to help others," said Anita Adams, one of the parent volunteers who helps to supervise the student council. "Not only did we donate the glasses, we became more aware of the issues that blind people face."

Bob Verette, who is a mentor in Felicia Roumeliotis's 4th-grade class and who is legally blind, addressed the student council during a recent meeting and talked to the students openly about his disability. In addition to the glasses, over $100 was raised and will be used to buy library books on blindness, braille and seeing-eye dogs, so all of Sanborn's students can be more educated on the topic.

The next charity effort for the Sanborn students was Sports Day, held on May 10. The student council organized a variety of athletic programs and encouraged all Sanborn students to bring in one piece of unused sporting equipment to donate to the Horizon Initiative in Boston. Items such as jump ropes, Frisbees, baseball bats, and balls were donated to homeless shelters and non-profit organizations that care for young children. A total of about 150 pieces were collected. In addition, $100 was raised and sent to Isaac, the school's foster boy who lives in Bolivia.

Life getting back to n-o-r-m-a-l for local spelling champion

By Adam Groff

Now that she's participated in the 74th annual Scripps Howard National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C., eighth-grader Maya Lucaci-Vashee, 13, of Doherty Middle School feels that she has a better perspective on her own life.

"I took losing with a grain of salt, because I resume a normal life and I have a busy performance schedule," said Lucaci-Vashee, who plays cello and piano, performs with the school orchestra, sings in the chorus, and takes dance lessons.

Lucaci-Vashee was given the opportunity to compete nationally when she won the Eagle-Tribune Spelling Bee at Timony Grammar School in Methuen on March 29. She and her mother, Larisa Lucaci, and her sister Lena, 11, spent all of last week in the nation's capital, along with 247 other bee contestants from around the nation.

On Tuesday, in the first round of competition, Lucaci-Vashee was undone by the word "scarabaeiform," which means "resembling a family of stout-bodied beetles."

"It was incredibly intense," said Lucaci-Vashee of the pressure on stage, "because as soon as you step up to the microphone, there's a camera in front of you, and a panel of judges that you have to spell to, and there are people snapping pictures in your face. And the most horrible part of the whole thing is that when you spell a word wrong, there's this awful little 'ding.'"

She said that after getting a word wrong, contestants are escorted offstage into a "comfort room" and treated to cookies and punch. "And you really don't feel like eating," she said.

After her time in the spotlight, Lucaci-Vashee and her mother and sister then attended some more of the competition on Wednesday and Thursday, enjoyed touring Washington and nearby Annapolis, and visited friends and family in their old hometown of Alexandria, Va.

What stands out most in the minds of both Maya and her mother is the nature of the competition.

"The winner, Sean Conley, was 13 and it was his third time at the spelling bee," said Lucaci-Vashee. "He has an advantage that other kids don't have."

She said that Conley, from Aitkin, Minn., claimed to have been studying for the spelling bee for three hours a night for the past six years.

"Basically, that's all he's been doing for half his life," she said.

"I saw one father berating his child for losing, talking about the family name and things like that," said Larisa Lucaci, "and I thought, 'Whoa, it's a good thing we have balance.'"

Both were also struck by the large role that luck played in the competition.

"Even Sean Conley was saying that there were words there that he didn't know that he was glad he didn't get," said Lucaci-Vashee.

"We just sort of fell into it," said Lucaci of her daughter's participation. "We were just happy because she's a great speller."

"If you saw the kids that won," said Lucaci-Vashee, who will attend Phillips Academy in the fall, "they, like, never got out in the sunshine."

In her commencement address, Barbara Landis Chase, Phillips Academy's head of school, urged graduates to keep moving, sing off-key, pay attention, stay young, and break molds.

At PA's 223th commencement, seniors move on

Phillips Academy

Three hundred Phillips Academy seniors, 144 boys and 156 girls, graduated Sunday, June 3, in the school's 223rd commencement ceremony, filled with tradition and jubilation.

About 3,000 people attended the graduation exercises, which took place in front of Samuel Phillips Hall on the school's Great Quadrangle. In a time-honored PA tradition, the graduation procession of faculty and students was led by the stirring sounds of the Clan MacPherson Pipes and Drums Band of Lawrence. Boys wore suit coats and ties; girls wore white dresses, and each carried a red rose.

Sunday's celebration followed a weekend of commencement events, including a senior-faculty banquet and a candlelight baccalaureate service in Cochran Chapel.

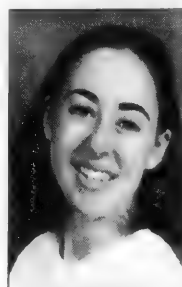

In her commencement address, Head of School Barbara Landis Chase cited the short piece of advice – "Keep moving" – given to graduates by Claude Moore Fuess, Andover's headmaster from 1933-1948. "Keep moving across this stage, but also keep moving in your life. Forward motion, putting one foot in front of the other is critical," said Chase.

Using other two-word metaphorical admonitions, she infused humor in her message to the graduates:

• Sing off-key – Don't be afraid to do things for fear you will not do them as well as you would like.

• Pay attention – to life, to everything around you. Breathe it in; look, listen, notice, savor life, every day of your life.

• Stay young – Hold on to the best qualities of youth: idealism and energy.

• Break molds – especially those that other people would have you stay within. Remember the true range of people, possibilities and passions the world of Andover embraces.

School President Joseph G. Maliekel of Green Oaks, Ill., also spoke with eloquence and humor to his classmates about what he owes the class of 2001, his parents, his teachers and the academy.

Chase announced five major prizes awarded to outstanding members of the graduating class:

► Nickole P. Rucker of Denver, Colo. – Non Sibi Award – to the student who has honored Phillips Academy's non sibi (not-for-self) tradition through his or her efforts on behalf of others;

► Joseph D. Lemire of Lowell, Mass. – Yale Bowl – to the member of the senior class who has attained the highest proficiency in scholarship and athletics;

► Han Liang Lie of Jakarta, Indonesia – Faculty Prize – for outstanding scholarship during the senior year;

► Julia E. O'Hern of Johnston, Iowa – Madame Sarah Abbot Award – to a young woman for strong character, leadership and outstanding scholarship; and ► Bradford P. Meacham of Munster, Ind. – Aurelian Honor Society Award – for sterling character, high scholarship and forceful leadership.

The Phillips Academy Class of 2001 will matriculate at a total of 93 four-year colleges and universities. Top choices include: Yale, 13; Harvard, 12; Cornell, 11; Georgetown, 10; Brown and Princeton, 9 each; Columbia and Stanford, 8 each; and Dartmouth, Middlebury and University of Pennsylvania, 7 each.

PA senior named Presidential Scholar

VIKAS GOELA of Andover, a senior at Phillips Academy and the son of Dr. Jitendra S. and Geeta G. Goela, has been named a 2001 Presidential Scholar, one of the nation's highest honors for high school students.

He has been invited to National Recognition Week in Washington, D.C., where he will be presented with a Presidential Scholar medallion to commemorate his designation.

Selected by the White House Commission on Presidential Scholars from nearly 2.8 million graduating high school seniors, the 141 scholars have demonstrated leadership, scholarship, contribution to school and community, and exceptional accomplishments in the arts, sciences and other fields of interest. The US Presidential Scholars Program was established in 1964, by executive order of the president, to recognize and honor some of the nation's most distinguished graduating high school seniors. The scholars represent excellence in education and the promise of greatness in young people.

Local students to perform in China with Phillips Academy Concert tour

Continuing a 135-year-old tradition of cultural exchange with China, Phillips Academy is sending 176 students and adults today, Thursday, on a musical tour of China.

This 17-day, three-city cultural exchange will include music, ping pong, martial arts, and the possible establishment of new educational exchange programs with Chinese schools.

More than a year in planning, the tour is the brainchild and organizational effort of William Thomas, the academy's director of performance and instructor of music. Former President George Bush, a 1942 graduate of Phillips Academy, offered his assistance by writing letters of introduction to help arrange visits to some of China's most prestigious concert halls and educational institutions. The 134 students (members of the Academy Cantata Choir and Chamber Orchestra) and 42 adults will perform in such landmark musical institutions as the Shanghai Grand Opera Theater, Beijing Concert Hall and St. John's Cathedral in Hong Kong.

"The year 2001 opens the third century in which Chinese students have engaged in educational and cultural exchange programs with Phillips Academy," says Barbara Landis Chase, head of school.

The Chinese government sponsored the first exchange with Phillips Academy in the 1870s, sending five Chinese students to study at the Academy. Today, comprehensive cross-cultural links bind Phillips Academy to China. For the past 20 years, the academy has included Chinese language and culture within its curriculum. Currently, international students comprise 10 percent of the student body, and the largest contingent of these students is from China. The Academy is also exploring the possibility of establishing new educational exchange programs with schools in Beijing and Shanghai.

"We are committed to nurturing a world community that encourages people of diverse backgrounds and beliefs to understand and respect one another," says Chase. "We believe the Phillips Academy concert tour in China will further that goal," Chase said.

The Cantata Choir tour is an annual tradition, organized and led by Thomas, who has taken students to Turkey, Greece, Italy, Spain, England and major US cities in past years. China is the furthest destination to which he has brought students.

While touring China, the students also will perform for a radio broadcast in Hong Kong and will visit and make music with students at Datong High School, Ren Min High School, Peking University High School and Beijing Normal University High School. "This tour has far-reaching cultural and collaborative appeal," says Thomas, "because we are playing not only for the Chinese, but with them." For example, a performance of Bach's Double Violin Concerto with the Shanghai Conservatory Orchestra will include a Phillips Academy student and a Chinese student playing a solo for each of the piece's three movements. In both Shanghai and Beijing, the program will include a work by a Chinese composer. Other concert pieces are Mozart's Non piu andrai from The Marriage of Figaro, Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D major,

TOWN TALK

West principal heads south

West Middle School Principal Vicki Simms has finally settled the question.

She has accepted a position as assistant superintendent for Bedford Public Schools. Simms notified the West Middle faculty of her decision Wednesday morning, and says she's looking forward to the challenge. After six years in Andover schools, Simms announced in March that she was looking for a new position out of town. She said that the loss of her husband, former Andover High School Principal Larry Robinson, to cancer in 1999 contributed to her decision to apply elsewhere.

The principal accepted the Bedford opportunity after becoming a finalist for principal positions at Dover-Sherborn Middle School, and in North Reading. Simms was one of two finalists voted on by the Bedford School Committee Tuesday night, said a secretary at Bedford's superintendent office.

Simms will complete her contract with Andover, which runs until June 30, said Bach, who received Simms's news with "mixed emotions."

"I personally have enjoyed working with her enormously. She's been a fine leader at West Middle School," Bach said. "This is a nice step up in her career, so I'm thrilled for her and I wish her the very best."

The search for Simms replacement will begin immediately, said Bach.

New special-ed head

Andover resident Susan O'Brien has been selected to replace Cheri Webb as the pupil personnel director of Andover schools, a position largely responsible for administering district special-education programs. Webb has resigned because her husband's company has transferred him to Houston, Texas. O'Brien, of Center Street, is currently the special education director for Hamilton-Wenham schools.

Overflow causes closure

There was more than just the smell of freshly-baked bagels coming from Bruegger's Bagel Bakery on Main Street on Monday — there was also water.

The bagel and coffee shop closed voluntarily due to potential contamination of raw sewage from an overflowing toilet, said Health Director Everett Penney. "The water got stuck on... in one of their wash-room areas, and water was running into the Bruegger's food establishment itself," said Penney. "They closed voluntarily and we didn't have to take action. They realized they had a sanitary problem and possible contamination."

Employees at John Valerio & Associates law office — located below Bruegger's — notified the Board of Health when sewer water started dripping down through their ceilings, Penney said. The biggest contamination threat, however, was to Bruegger's customers.

"The employees were walking around on this floor with sneakers and shoes and might have picked up raw sewage," said Penney. "They could transfer that to the food."

Bruegger's was still closed on Tuesday, but an employee told the Townsmen they would open for business first thing Wednesday morning. The Health Department will first inspect the area to make sure it is sanitary, added Penney. Bruegger's employees would not comment on the amount of business they lost Monday and Tuesday.

When Olympics called, he answered

White keeps US athletes prepared to fly down icy tracks — face first

By Adam Groff

Just one month after he was married last year, Doug White got a call late at night with a job offer he'd been waiting for. The next day he quit his job, kissed his wife Debbie goodbye, and was gone for six months.

Such is the life of an Olympic physical therapist.

"It was a tough decision to make," says White.

When the Olympics called last October, White was not only a newlywed, he was in the middle of helping his wife refurbish their 200-year-old house on River Street in Ballardvale. He had also been working for two years with Andover Youth Services to develop a conditioning and weight-lifting program at Andover High School.

"I had to think about the house, think about my wife, think about Youth Services. But I sat down and talked to my wife, and she said, 'It's taken you eight years to get this far. Do it,'" he says.

So White is now the physical therapist, athletic director, and director of sports medicine for the United States Olympic Skeleton Team.

Skeleton team?

Think of one person sledding head-first at almost 80 miles per hour down an Olympic bobsled course on something resembling a Flexible Flyer. That approximates the sport of skeleton sledding, which will appear at the 2002 Olympics in Salt Lake City for the first time in more than 50 years.

The sport, developed in Switzerland in the 1880s, actually predates bobsledding, but it has only appeared at the Olympics twice before, in 1928 and 1948. There have long been skeleton World Cup competitions, though, and the US has been participating since 1986.

"The potential for injury is much more dangerous," says White of skeleton compared to bobsledding, "but at World Cup level they don't crash very often."

The skeleton sled itself measures 3 feet by 16 inches. The rider gets a running start by sprinting 50 meters while bent over pushing the sled, and then lunges onto it, positioned face down and hands back, his or her face a scant two inches from the ground. The sled is controlled at breakneck speeds on the curving track by slight shifts in body weight and positioning.

At least bobsleds are largely enclosed — and lugers ride feet first.

As the team's sports medicine director, White is responsible for team members' physical fitness while on tour, from stretching before a run to cooling down afterward, to, of course, treating any injuries that may occur while training or competing.

"My philosophy is, if we catch it early,

When he's not by the water near his Ballardvale home, Andover's Doug White can be found near the ice, helping to keep US Winter Olympians in tip-top shape.

it's easier to treat," says White. "You want to keep a sore hamstring from becoming a pulled hamstring. These athletes have to be at least 99 percent or they aren't competitive." Illustrating this, says White, is the fact that the first 10 places in skeleton competitions in Nagano, Japan last year were within three-tenths of a second.

Skeleton teams train and compete on the bobsled tracks of the world, mainly in Canada, Germany, Austria, and Switzerland, and the US team is based in Lake Placid, N.Y. This is what keeps White out of the house for so much of the six-month season. He says it's worth it, though.

"Basically, I've been working for years to try to get to this level," says White, who got a degree in physical therapy from the University of Miami in 1993. "I've pretty much volunteered everywhere I could."

In addition to working in the medical tent at the finish line of the Boston Marathon, White worked with the volleyball team at the 1996 Paralympics in Atlanta. He made contacts in Atlanta that led to his being invited last summer to do some work at the Olympic Training Center at Lake Placid, and this is where he was introduced to the sport of skeleton.

"When (the US skeleton team) decided they wanted to go to the Olympics, they assessed their needs, and sports medicine was high on the list," says White, "and they called me."

And on very short notice.

"They called me up at 10:30 at night the day before Halloween and said, 'Do you want to do this?' and I said, 'Yes,' and they said 'Be in Calgary (Canada) tomorrow at 11.'"

White says he was home for a total of six days from October to this past March. This October, he will be off again for the last round of skeleton training and World Cup competition before the 2002 Olympics kick off in February. Right now, he is back at work on his house, and working at New England Rehabilitation at Cedardale Athletic in Haverhill.

White says the honor of doing Olympic sports medicine will not turn into a career for him, however.

"This is my one shot, probably," he says. "I'm 39 now, and it gets harder to travel as you get older — week to week in different countries, packing and unpacking your bag — I'll just do it this one year, then settle down and raise a family."

The price of rumors

Phillips Academy will spare no cost to take care of its students and athletes — but $1.4 million for a storage shed?

That's what some people were wondering when they heard a rumor that PA had bought a home near the site of its new hockey rinks, currently under construction. According to the rumor, a former resident sold the house to a newcomer for more than $850,000, who then sold it to PA for $1.4 million — which would use it for a maintenance shed.

Michael Williams, PA's facilities director, says there's not a cent of truth to it. "We have not purchased any property recently, and we have no plans to buy," he said.

Stroll through Andover's gardens at Historical Society Garden Tour

Gardens range from the intimate to elegant

'DAISIES AND DOGWOODS," the Andover Historical Society Garden Tour, will welcome visitors into eight private Andover gardens on Saturday, June 16. From 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., rain or shine, guests will be inspired by a series of gardens that display a diversity of plant material, landscaping features and personal gardening styles.

The gardens range from small, intimate spaces to large, open vistas; gardening styles run the gamut from casual whimsy to formal elegance. Every visitor is bound to discover a garden that appeals to his or her gardening sense, and may well acquire an itchy green thumb during the course of the tour.

One of the tour gardens surrounds a Federal period home and represents both classical and romantic traditions. Formal English garden rooms, developed over 25 years, feature tree peonies, unusual evergreen varieties and an array of azaleas and prize rhododendrons. Complementary gardens on the lower part of the property have a changeable character and house a wildlife containment pond and a collection of folk art ornaments.

Another tour stop is a charming cottage garden. It has an intentionally informal look with touches of whimsy in the eclectic garden ornaments. Challenged by a lack of abundant sunshine, the gardeners use a variety of shade plants and continue to experiment, always looking for the right plant for the right place.

A long-neglected landscape on the garden tour itinerary was reclaimed in the mid-'80s and now features an abundance of flowering trees and shrubs. Hundreds of bulbs bloom in the spring, all carefully chosen varieties disdained by the "critters" who frequent the property. This garden is planned to look most colorful in April, May and September and will present a leafy green retreat in June.

Tour tickets are priced at $10 in advance and $12 on tour day. Tickets are now available and can be purchased at the Andover Historical Society and the Andover Bookstore. For more information about the tour, call the Andover Historical Society at 978-475-2236.

Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue and Haydn's Mass in angustis (Mass in Time of Anxiety—Lord Nelson Mass).

In honor of the 30th anniversary of "ping pong diplomacy," named for President Richard Nixon's opening of trade and travel to China, the students will play ping pong in a demonstration match against Chinese students.

Following a concert at the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology, a student martial arts demonstration will be led by a Chinese master. "This illustrates the broader spectrum of cultural exchange," says Thomas.

Special efforts for the China concert tour were made by Madame Li Xiaolin, vice president of The Chinese People's Association for Friendship in Foreign Countries; Shirley Young, chairman of the Committee of 100 Cultural Institute and a 1951 graduate of Abbot Academy, which merged with Phillips Academy in 1973; and Dr. Yuan Han, chairman of the academy's Chinese department.

In a letter of introduction for the tour, former President Bush said, "This cultural exchange brings talented young musicians to China; and, by doing so, continues a long tradition of person-to-person interaction between the great people of China and this outstanding American school. While visiting the United States a few years ago, President Jiang Zemin stated, China needs to know the United States better, and vice versa. I believe there is no better way to accomplish that worthy goal than with cultural exchanges like the Phillips Academy concert tour in China."

Former President Bush was chief of the US Liaison Office in the People's Republic of China from 1974 to 1975.

Lindsey Pearson is at home in front of her sewing machine, or on the runway (below).

She's got it all sewn up

AHS grad uses her fashion imagination

By Rebecca Piro

During her first year in college, there was one thing resident Lindsey Pearson missed most — her sewing needles.

"I decided to do basketball this year instead of fashion stuff," says the Andover High grad, who just wrapped up her first year at New York University. "But next year, I'm bringing my sewing machine with me to school."

At 19, Pearson is closely following the world of fashion — as well as preparing for her future role in it — while balancing a busy school and extracurricular schedule. Having played varsity basketball all four years at Andover High, Pearson tried the sport at NYU, instead of focusing solely on design. But now, she's made up her mind to put down the basketball.

"I love the sport, but in New York there are so many opportunities," she says, including opportunities to develop her creativity.

In high school, Pearson participated as a model and designer in the student-run "Keep it Wild Fashion Show," a production by Andover Youth Services. Pearson looked at the shows as a challenge.

"I would come up with the most outrageous things I could for my models to wear down the runway," she says. One of the most memorable examples was a fake fur outfit, "stitched up the side with leather cord."

"The side panel was pretty much bare," she remembers. "My model was a bit nervous going down the runway."

As producer for the "Keep it Wild" shows, Carole Chanler remembers many such risque numbers from Pearson. "She has a vivid imagination when it comes to designing," says Chanler. "She can create something that is a showstopper on the runway."

Pearson had the opportunity to compare her own creations with those of Calvin Klein and Ralph Lauren this spring, when she helped usher a major fashion show in New York. The experience was unbelievable, says Pearson, and it reminded her of her love for design.

"Being in New York," she says, "I can sit there, and watch and observe the other trends and different fabrics people are using."

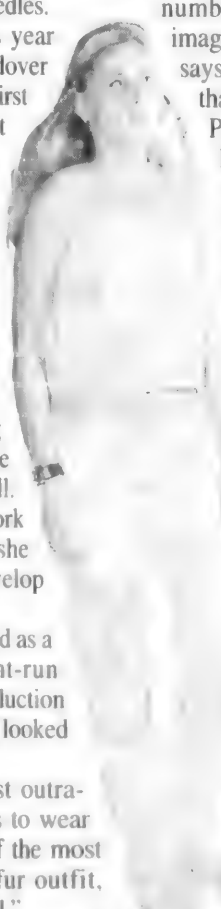

Of course, the styles she sees on the street aren't usually as showy as the ones on the runway. "For practicality reasons, there's not a lot of people that want to walk down the street half-naked," she adds.

As to how far she'll pursue her own fashion interests, Pearson is still unsure.

"My mom says, 'You have a talent and you really need to develop it.'" She pauses. "But living in New York is really intimidating."

Pearson recognizes she's one of hundreds of aspiring talents in New York that are looking to break into the big-time. That's true — but then

'42nd Street' revival includes Andover dancer

By Judy Wakefield

When the Broadway show 42nd Street was honored with a Tony Award for "Revival-Musical" earlier this week, the 53 cast members went wild with excitement. And, an Andover dancer was among them.

Melissa Rae Mahon, a 1994 graduate of Andover High School who is best-remembered for her choreography skills in local shows and her big Broadway dreams, said after the Tonys were announced, the performance was a night she will never forget.

Melissa Rae Mahon

"It was really an amazing evening for us. I am a Rockette, too, and I have been on that stage more times than I can count and nothing has ever been like it was that night," she said in a telephone interview from her Manhattan apartment. "Lights were on in the audience because of all the cameras (for the television shows taping). I was dancing and could see the people. Usually, it's dark in the audience.

There were 600 smiling faces and they were clapping," she said.

Plans were made ahead of time to make sure the dancers could see the conductor in spite of all those lights. They stayed focused and the show went off without a hitch.

Staying focused is Mahon's strength, and she said she got lots of training in that department when she lived in Andover.

"I came to Andover in the middle of high school and choreographed the plays in high school. And, I was involved with Merrimack Junior Theatre. This was always my dream and I am really blessed to be here," she said.

Her local choreography credits include Sweet Charity, Grease, and West Side Story.

"Andover is where I got my feet wet. I was somewhat of an authority figure when I choreographed those shows. Then, I went off for formal training and had this enormous base of experience and lots of support from Andover," Mahon said. "I was very fortunate."

She attended Point Park College in Pittsburgh, Pa., and graduated in just three years. She then went to New York and was part of the final Broadway cast of Cats where she played Cassandra. She was also the assistant choreographer for The Sound of Music.

She is among the ensemble members of 42nd Street. The musical premiered in 1980 and the current revival production runs through the summer at the Ford Center for the Performing Arts in New York City.

Mahon's hectic performance schedule doesn't allow much time for leisure so she doesn't get back to Andover much. Plus, her parents no longer live in town. They moved to New Hampshire last year.

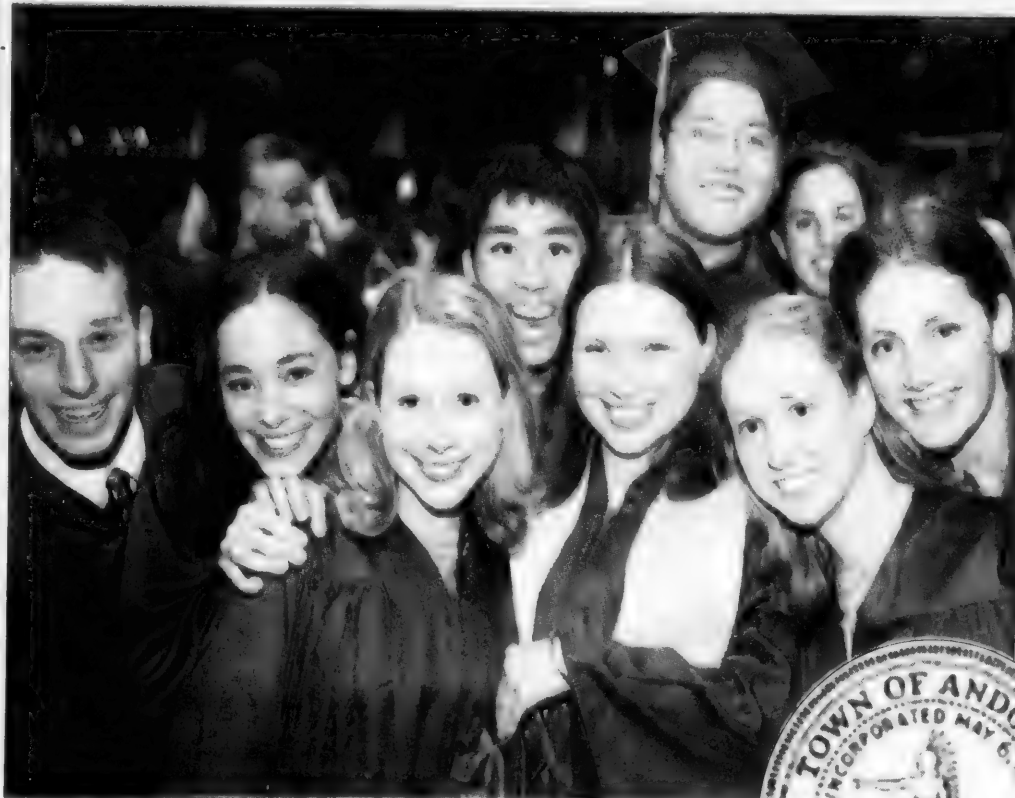

She plans to attend her 10-year reunion at Andover High School and will most likely will have news about being cast in another successful Broadway show.

"I had an audition yesterday for another show. You always have to be thinking ahead in this business," she said. "I don't have a contract for another show or anything, but I have a few different things in the works."

Melissa Rae Mahon is in the ensemble cast of 42nd Street.

Hats off to them — AHS seniors celebrate the end of their high school careers.

Class ready for latest change

After four principals in four years, they move on

By Rebecca Piro

Class president John Keaten walked up to the podium at the Tsongas Arena, looked down at his fellow students, and took a deep breath.

"Andover High School Class of 2001 — this is what we've all been waiting for!"

A flurry of blue caps and a roar of applause drowned his words, as AHS seniors cast off their mortarboards. Moments later, the people who had walked into the arena as students filed out as graduates.

These young adults will confront the future with ease, if their handling of change during their four years at AHS is any indicator, predicted administrators at AHS commencement exercises Monday night.

"I believe all of you have become an expert in change," said Superintendent Claudia Bach. "While some of the (changes) were positive and exciting, some were unsettling, like the next new principal."

Bach explained that the Class of 2001 had four principals — one for each year of high school — and that adjusting to those changes and styles in administration were not easy. "Yet through it all, you have been wonderfully positive. You've taken the changes in stride and made the most of them. You made this year work," she added.

"Although ambiguity can be stressful, you've come together as a group and risen above it," agreed Richard Santagati, president of Merrimack College, who delivered the address to the graduates.

Monday's ceremony marked the completion of the seniors' high school career, but their efforts cannot end there, said Bach. Adapting to change and working to improve one's surroundings is a life-long responsibility.

"Now you must make your college better, then your workplace better, then your community better," Bach said. "Just keep doing as you've been doing... and you will all make us very proud."

Change is not always easy for even teachers and administrators to swallow, as was proven by Principal Peter Anderson. His voice quavered as he said goodbye to the class with which he worked during his first year as principal.

"You have taught me much, and reminded me of what the passion is in my life," Anderson said.

Moving forward can also mean changes for the better, said senior Erica Cataldo, as she read her class essay to the audience. It can mean a second chance to do the things she wanted to in high school.

"I would enjoy more and worry less. I would look for the good qualities in everyone. I would be more appreciative and grateful for what I have," she said.

All of AHS will experience change next year, as Assistant Principal Steve Richardson announced his retirement after dedicating 33 years to the school. Richardson thanked the students for their kind words, and turned the focus back to the graduates.

"This is a very, very special day," he told them. "This is the start of a new beginning. I wish you the very best."

Despite their experience with change, some graduates swallowed hard when they considered the future.

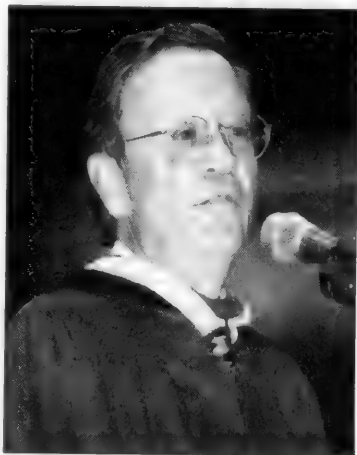

"I'll miss the people," said Chris Cataldo, who will attend Merrimack College in the fall. "You grew up with them. Then one day, you have to pack up and hit the road."

Where are they headed?

Most to college, five to armed forces

To someone observing all the head-and-shoulders photographs in the back of this graduation section, the 377-person Andover High School graduating Class of 2001 may appear large in number. With a closer look at the students themselves, one may also find that the graduating seniors hold large expectations for their future performances — and sizable dreams.

"We have had a very academically competitive class and have had a large number of students accepted at very competitive schools. Six students were accepted at Cornell, 13 to Tufts, three at Harvard, and 14 to Boston College," says Allison Collins, program director of the AHS guidance department.

Traditionally, AHS sends approximately 90 percent of its graduating seniors off to seek levels of higher education. The graduating class of 2001 has worked hard to continue this legacy, according to Andover High educators.

Members of the 2001 AHS graduating class plan to attend a wide variety of colleges and universities including the Rhode Island School of Design, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, George Washington University, the University Of Massachusetts and Merrimack College, the last of which is partially located in Andover.

"The interests of the students vary because of the large size of the class, but we have a lot of students who are interested in science, engineering and business, which may be a reflection of the economy," says Collins. "This year we also have six students who were accepted into art schools."

Diana Finegold has been taking a college poetry course since January.

This grad was college-bound months ago

By springtime, many seniors say they're ready to graduate. Diana Finegold really was. In fact, she completed her classwork in January, six months before the typical Andover senior.

"I could have had my diploma then, but I wanted to wait until I could actually walk down the aisle with my class," she says.

That opportunity finally arrived Monday, when Finegold walked across the stage at the Tsongas Arena and took her diploma in hand, marking the

Ultimate experience for class president

For senior class president John Keaten, the one event from this past year that sticks out most prominently in his mind is waiting a whole day, on the day before school started, for one of the school parking permits. "Kids started lining up at 11, and they didn't start handing out permits until 5," says Keaten.

Long term, though, the thing he will remember most fondly probably is not waiting in line, but waiting for a frisbee to come down into his outstretched hands.

Keaten and his friend Ian Darling started an ultimate frisbee team at the high school, with the help of Andover Youth Services. This year the team went to the New England Ultimate Frisbee Championships at Fort Devens.

"It's one of those sports where you really weigh your body and put it all into it," he says. "Compared to other sports, take your pick - baseball, track, football - ultimate frisbee is the most team-building and rewarding."

Keaten also plays on a corporate ultimate frisbee team, with Terra-dyne Corp., and he's planning to start a town frisbee league this summer "just for fun."

Student government, of course, also figures prominently on Keaten's AHS resume. Although he only participated in his sophomore and senior years, he was elected class president both times. Keaten says that while it is rewarding to plan and execute spirit-building class activities, he sometimes wishes the student council were "more of a governing body and less of a social-event planner." However, he says, "that's coming back with Mr. Anderson." He is also pleased with Principal Peter Anderson's plan to reinvigorate the Collins Center for the Performing Arts.

This fall, Keaten will attend the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, where he plans to major in marketing or public relations. UMass Amherst is, not surprisingly, ranked tenth in the nation in ultimate frisbee. And Keaten will not be bringing a car to campus with him.

"official" end of her high school career.

Finegold is still ahead of her peers. Rather than bask in the glory of finishing early, Finegold set to work on two college-level courses in poetry and psychology at Northern Essex College — which means she'll have a head-start on her requirements this fall at George Washington University in Washington, D.C.

"It kept my focus. Instead of doing the senior slide thing... I was actually doing something useful," she says. "I didn't have any opportunity to slack off."

Not that Finegold has many spare moments. She's big into community service and has belonged to the Andover Youth Council for years. She's worked at soup kitchens for the homeless, and currently donates time to the Samaritans in Methuen, a group that offers support for people dealing with suicide and depression. "I like to keep busy," she adds.

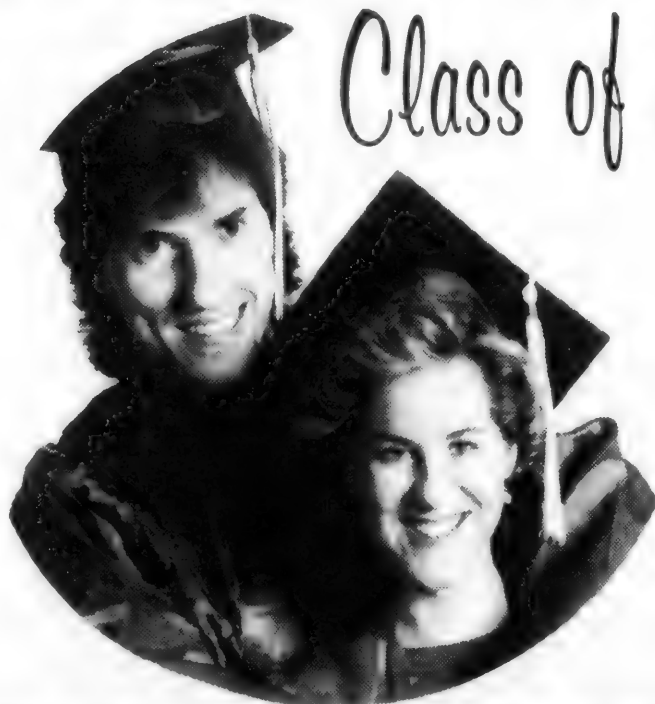

One might assume that this ambitious teen feels pressure to go above and beyond, being sister to state Rep. Barry Finegold. But she says no.

"We have such a good relationship that there has never been a competition," she laughs. "Each child in my family is so different that there's nothing to compare us to. We all do our own thing in our own wonderful way."

Cleary looking to become 'an unstoppable music force'

Looks like the club scene might want to clear the way for Andover High School graduate Bob Cleary, who, in his own words, has set his collegiate sights on becoming "an unstoppable music force."

How does one go about doing this? While it's still early in the game, Cleary's general strategy involves fusing two components, musical technique and sound recording, at Berkeley College this September.

This career path might not come as a surprise to fellow Andover High School students who are familiar with the band Flyaway. Cleary contributes vocals and harmonious guitar grooves for this garage band. His mother, Linda Cleary, explains that the band's sound most closely resembles the Allman Brothers.

Cleary's musical career path so far travels mostly within the Andover School system, starting with the saxophone in the South Elementary School Band. Since then, he's moved on to guitar and to achieving his high school goal, which was to play in a garage rock band. The seeds of this quest were planted Cleary's junior year in a math class, where he met drummer Casey Rillahan. The pair teamed up to compose a musical tribute to Pi for their teacher, Dr. Shannon's "Pi Pandemonium Day" held on March 14. (Get it - 3.14?)

"We made a tape with chords and drums and rapped over the music with facts about Pi," explains Cleary.

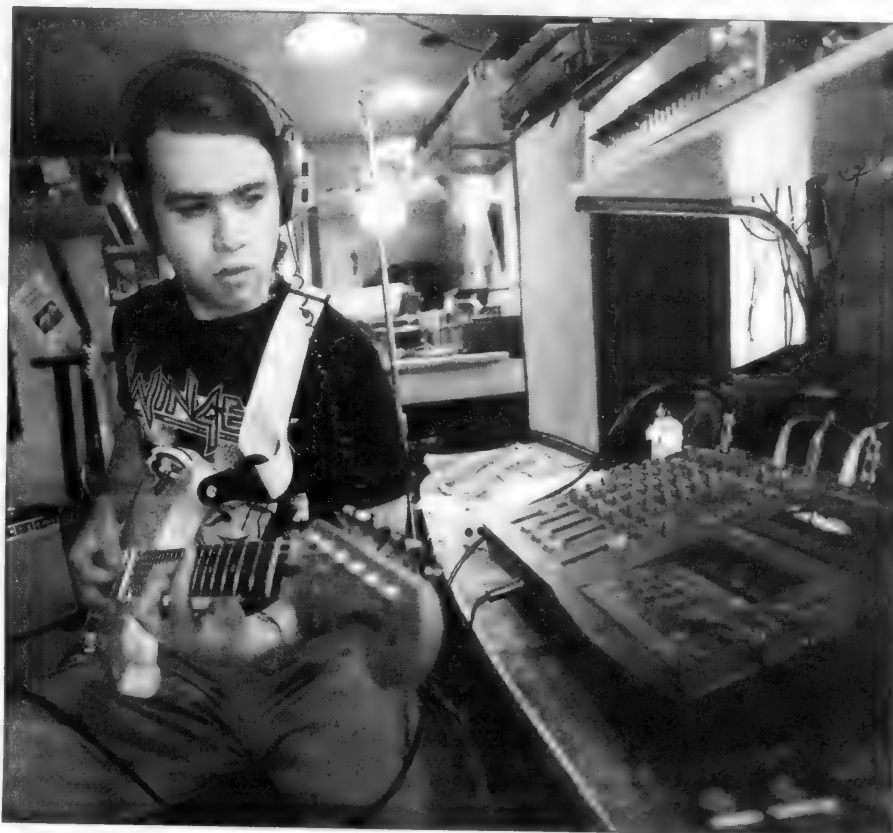

According to Cleary, as he has matured, the band name has too. Flyaway actually began as Fat Cleary and the Rhythm Pigs during his junior year. Spending countless hours composing and creating with fellow band members Casey Rillahan, Dave Wholey and Paul Nardone, Flyaway accomplished something rare for a high-school rock band. Flyaway cut its first 10-track CD, Funk on the Flyaway. "It was just amazing that I was able to have an opportunity to do that," says Cleary.

The new AHS grad speaks fondly of the support he received from both parents and Andover community members, especially Bill Fahey of Andover Youth Services. He advises incoming Andover High freshmen to take advantage of such support and to come into the school with an open mind. "There will be a lot of people you don't know, but you should definitely get to know everyone. Don't limit yourself to hanging out with only one group of people."

This September, Cleary's planning on composing and playing more songs, and discovering the technical know-how behind recording these new creations at Berkeley. Then, perhaps, there will be no stopping him.

— Jennifer Lappin

Bob Cleary plays in his recording studio, located by his house. Cleary's band, Flyaway, has cut a 10-track CD, and he'll be flying away to Berkeley College in the fall.

Graduate Jessie Fink is motivated to succeed, whether designing a new outfit or putting a new roof on a house.

A Jessie of all trades

Jessie Fink isn't sure what to expect when she walks through the doors of Tulane University in September, but she's ready. "I'm pretty self-motivated," she says. "I think it will be hard, but good at the same time."

She's spent her young-adult life motivating herself and others to make a positive difference in her community. "If I want to do something, I'll usually try my hardest to get it to work," Fink adds.

Fink tutored high-school freshmen to help them improve their grades while they adapted to the transition from middle school. She rallied her community to support the youth-center project at Special Town Meeting last fall. She also tried to construct an informational Web site for Greater Lawrence youth about drugs or pregnancy — something that didn't work out, but Fink gave it her best.

One of Fink's biggest challenges required picking up a hammer and learning how to put a new roof on a house, as part of one of several mission trips Fink attended with her South Church youth group, Pilgrim Fellowship.

"We go to different organizations and repair houses," she says. "It's hard work, but it's not too bad when you have adults who can tell you what to do."

At 18, Fink is ready to make the trek to New Orleans, where she'll begin her college career. She knows it won't be easy, but it's another challenge for her to tackle. "It's like going to a foreign country," she says, referring to the residents' southern accents. "Just getting used to that is going to be an experience in itself."

Vivienne Crossley, goalie

Vivienne Crossley played softball in ninth grade, and she was on the track team her sophomore year, but she really found her game during junior year, when she got into lacrosse.

"It's a great sport," says Crossley, the team's goalie. "It's very team-oriented, very competitive, and more physical than a lot of sports. There's no way you can get around being in shape."

So she threw herself into the fundraising effort, aided by Andover Youth Services, to make lacrosse a varsity sport at Andover, and it became one this year. Crossley says the team spirit is intense.

"Most of the team is very dedicated, and it keeps us improving academically," she says. On game days, the team dresses up in various costumes to raise their visibility in school. "And we sign a special contract where we promise not to drink or do drugs."

Crossley also gets paid for helping Youth Services Director Bill Fahey teach lacrosse. Her other jobs are at Kitty's Restaurant in North Reading, and in the summer she is a janitor at West Elementary School.

She looks forward to attending school this fall at Flagler College in Florida. Crossley, a participant in Youth Services' yearly "Keep It Wild" fashion show, was attracted to the school's business and fashion program. In addition, she says she likes the idea of going far away to college.

"Andover is somewhat secluded because it's a wealthier town," she says. "and I feel that I'd like to get to know the rest of the world and how it works and not just be in my own environment forever."

Crossley wants to own her own clothing store. "I couldn't even really tell you why," she says, but she suspects part of it is the lure of being her own boss. "I'm not a person who likes to follow the rules."

Your Dental HEALTH

by Richard D. Hopgood, D.M.D., F.A.G.D.

REMOVABLE PARTIAL DENTURES

While patients often prefer fixed partial dentures, there are cases when the dentist may recommend a removable partial denture. A toothless span, for instance, may be too long or there may be too much bone loss. Removable partial dentures replace missing teeth by attaching acrylic or porcelain teeth to a gum-colored plastic base that is connected by a metal or acrylic frame. Metal clasps, which are designed to grasp the abutment tooth or the precision attachments built into a crowned abutment tooth, help retain the partial denture in the mouth. Precision attachments are generally more aesthetic than metal clasps and they are nearly invisible. To ensure a successful fit, a thorough preplanning evaluation with the dentist is essential.

Dental health is a lifelong process, and teeth are meant to last a lifetime. When teeth are lost, however, due to gum disease, neglect, or trauma, there are ways to minimize the damage. Removable partial dentures, full dentures, bridges, and implants, are just some of the tools dentists can use today to ensure a healthy, happy smile. Here at 296 Lowell Street, Rt 133 (with easy access off Rt 93), we'll be glad to tell you of today's options for maximum smile power. Call 978-475-2431 for an appointment.

Trade gas pedal for bike pedal? No way

By Rebecca Piro

Ken Shapiro of Wildwood Road loves to bicycle. But he's never considered cycling to work.

"It certainly is dangerous," says Shapiro, who owns a North Reading McDonald's. "I could be riding along at 7 a.m. in the morning, and there's going to be someone that blows through a stop sign."

Steve Colyer, Andover planning director, says his job makes it impossible to bike to work. "I live about a mile and a half from Town Hall, but because of my schedule... I need to have my car on a short leash," says Colyer. In the event that a last-minute meeting is scheduled out of town, he cannot bike "unless the meeting was at 12 and I left at 8 o'clock in the morning."

Biking to work is nearly impossible in today's working society, according to many Andover residents, commuters and business representatives.

For almost 10 years, the state Department of Transportation has sponsored Bike-to-Work Month in hopes of convincing commuters to improve their personal health, the health of the environment and the traffic congestion by opting to pedal to work, says Jerry Gauron, owner of Cycle Stop on Chestnut Street. Yet most of the people questioned by the Townsman had never heard of Bike to Work Month. They also said biking to work is just not feasible.

While biking to work could help some avoid the daily traffic crunch, few Andover workers will try it.

"A lot of (employees) live close to Boston, so they'd have to take a highway," says James Marshall, director of business development at Tepperman/Ray Associates on Windsor Street.

Even if workers had the flexibility to bike to work, they might not have a place to ride. Andover lacks bike lanes on its major roads and bike paths throughout town, says Bill Pennington of Clark Road.

"A lot of roads don't have any shoulders on them, and there's no bike lane, he says, emphasizing the squeeze on Routes 114 and 125. "We're riding right on top of the white line. If you go to the left, you hit gravel. If we go to the right, we hit traffic. You have to have nerves of steel."

Town officials planning a redesign of Main Street petitioned the state for months to get a waiver for required bike lanes on Route 28, a state highway. They were successful.

Traffic is another issue altogether. "Going home with the traffic is suicide," says Gauron. At Cycle Stop, he offered incentives to his employees to bike to work during May. Two of them took him up on the offer.

"It's congested (in Boston), but you're going 50 miles an hour. We're tightly packed here (in Andover), but it's a controlled madness," he says.

Despite the challenges of biking to work, Andrea Leary, co-director of the River Road Transportation Management Association, is determined to get people pedaling. The TMA – an association that works to reduce traffic congestion and air pollution from vehicles – is sponsoring its own Bike to Work month during June. Participating companies have one designated day when employees can take the challenge – and receive free T-shirts, water bottles and even breakfasts as incentives. "If you (use alternative transportation) even one day a week, that's a great thing and a significant help to the environment if you have enough people doing it," says Leary.

Almost 70 people have already signed up to participate in this first-year promotion. "We've got between 65 and 70 participants the first time out, which I think is great," says Leary. "Next year, you'll see even more."

Regardless, Pennington says biking through some areas of town just isn't worth the risk. "I'd have to play Russian roulette," he says.

Reading program looks to floor kids

By Adam Groff

Last Wednesday morning, students at the Frost Elementary School in Lawrence were treated to an hour of storytelling and performances of popular fairy tales, courtesy of Andover and Lawrence flooring retailer Arrow Floor Carpet One. The "Carpet One Magic Carpet Time" literacy program is touring the nation for the second year, teaching young people the value of reading.

"It's amazing how the kids' eyes light up," said Arrow Floor owner and Andover resident Ken Traub. "I had about three teachers call me later, they were so impressed with the program."

In keeping with the program's motif, students were issued swatches of carpet to sit on during the performance, which featured enactments of children's favorites like Snow White and The Boy Who Cried Wolf. School administrators and teachers, as well as students, were asked to play bit parts in the performances.

Carpet One is a national floor-covering retailer that partners with local, independent retailers such as Arrow Floor. It now has more than 1,400 stores worldwide. Carpet One says it developed the Magic Carpet Time Tour in conjunction with elementary reading specialists, and its teams of actors are scheduled to visit more than 600 schools nationwide this year.

At the end of Wednesday's performance in Lawrence, each student was given a copy of the book Doug Counts Down, by Pam Munoz Ryan.

"I thought it was great that we could give something back to the community," said Traub. "It's something really positive for the kids."

Traub said that if the program runs next year, he would like to have it visit an elementary school in Andover.

Beaven &amp; Associates

Strengthening academic skills in advance of an SSAT or SAT is the key to the best results on these tests. Clever, strategic thinking cannot in and of itself raise the score of a student who lacks a solid background. The most effective thinking on the test springs from a student's self confidence in his own knowledge. Beaven and Associates, a private tutoring agency in downtown Andover, has for twenty-five years helped students build their knowledge base and achieve their full potential on the national tests. Graduates of their tutorials have gone on to attend the nation's leading prep schools and Ivy League colleges. Beaven and Associates was established in 1976 with the goal of creating individualized programs that put the student at the center of his or her own educational experience. Each program is self-paced and takes into account a student's learning style, aptitude, and potential. Each student contracts with a tutor to meet a mutually agreed upon goal. A student may aim to reach a better performance level in his or her present schoolwork, attain a higher score on the College Boards, or pursue an extra subject for personal enrichment. Their small tutorial groups help students develop the skills and motivation to realize their true potential. Experienced teachers at Beaven and Associates tutor students in English, major foreign languages, social studies, math, and sciences. The agency welcomes, like the old fashioned one-room schoolhouse, students of all ages and works with them individually in small tutorial groups. Students attend, over a number of weeks, individually scheduled tutorials that are renewable or extendible. Inquiries and applications for programs during the summer and academic year are now being accepted. Enrollment is limited. The tutor at Beaven and Associates believes that teaching is an art, that as in the Socratic method, the teacher is a learning and exploring participant in the process, and that in the right setting the human mind will grow at its best when challenged and cultivated. The role of the tutor is to strive to enhance the student's natural curiosity, imagination, and independent thinking. Visit their Website at beavenandassociates.com to learn more about their programs. Beaven and Associates is located at 91 Main St., Andover. AHS Roundup: Bruce Brown blazes in the 200 meters

The latest feat from athletic Brown family

By Rick Harrison

Bruce Brown is now the third Massachusetts high school state champion from his athletically-gifted family.

The Andover High boys track-and-field standout earned the distinction after running the 200 meters faster than anyone else at the annual MIAA All-State Championship Meet held in the rain at Worcester State College.

Bruce, a junior who won the race on his 18th birthday, joins younger sister Connie and twin sister Sally who have gathered numerous state individual and relay titles for the two-time reigning AHS state champion girls swim and dive team.

Brown blazed the 200 meters in a personal-best 21.9 seconds, edging out favored Dan King of Newton North who finished in 22 seconds flat and third-place Ralph Shirley of Brockton High (22.4).

Brown's gold medal performance came on the heels of a 22.0 clocking in the Eastern Mass. Class B Meet the previous week, a time that equalled the existing Class B record.

The versatile sprinter/jumper, who earned 10 team points for his victory, added two more when he also placed fifth in the long jump with a leap of 21'1".

That effort was 11 inches shy of the winning distance of 21'11 3/4" achieved by Derek Swart of Algonquin Regional in Northboro, but only 3 1/2" short of second-place Robert Whitaker of Brockton.

AHS senior Tim Galebach, the Merrimack Valley Conference and Class B two-mile champ, continued to lower his personal-best time in the deuce after placing fourth at the All-States in 9:31.14.

That clipped six seconds off his Class B time but still left him almost 10 seconds behind the torrid pace of runaway winner Neal Graves of Mohawk Regional (9:21.78).

Brown and Galebach combined for 16 points to place the Golden Warriors an impressive eighth in a field of 52 schools that scored at least one point.

Both athletes are eligible to compete in the season-ending New England Championship Meet scheduled this Saturday at Winnacunnet High in Hampton, N.H. (11 a.m.).

The Andover girls did not score at Worcester State, but were hoping that Ogechi Ibe and Courtney Hale would put some points on the board in the field events scheduled this week after Townsmen presstime at Holy Cross College.

Because of the soggy conditions the shot put, discus, javelin and pole vault competitions were postponed at Worcester State and rescheduled.

Ibe throws the shot and discus and Hale is a pole vaulter.

Six AHS teams also launched play, some after rain delays, in the single-elimination MIAA Tournaments.

At presstime the boys and girls tennis teams were the only ones still alive in the post-season (see related story below), while the baseball, softball, girls lacrosse and boys lacrosse teams had suffered season-ending losses.

BASEBALL

The Andover High varsity baseball team wrapped up an interesting season by splitting a pair of Division 1 North Tournament games.

Coach Ken Maglio's crew, seeded 18th in a 20-team field, outslugged Beverly 12-9 in the preliminary round as Jeff Volinski led the attack with two doubles, a single and five RBI.

The Golden Warriors were then ousted from the single-elimination tourney with a tough 3-2 loss to top seed Lincoln-Sudbury under the lights at Feeley Field in Sudbury.

Kevin Shepard wrapped up an outstanding season and AHS career by pitching a complete-game seven-hitter in the defeat.

Andover fell short of winning the L-S game by a narrow margin, when a long double by Chris Hanlon missed being a three-run homer by a few feet. Had the ball cleared the fence the locals would have been 4-3 winners.

The tourney results left AHS with a final 10-12 record.

The Warriors lost several close regular season games to Lowell, Peabody and Revere, and were without co-ace pitcher Volinski on the mound for all but one memorable start (season finale against Norton).

Stat leaders

Jeff Volinski finished as the top hitter on the team at .444, while other regulars over the .300 mark were MVC 1 Player of the Year Kevin Shepard (.386), Chris Hanlon (.356) and Jeff Marshall (.320).

Tufts University-bound Volinski also led in hits (32), doubles (7), total bases (43), RBI (25) and slugging percentage (.518).

Shepard was tops in runs scored (23), stolen bases (17) and tied with Marshall in home runs (2).

Boston College-bound Shepard was the leader in every pitching category, posting a 4-3 record and 1.04 ERA while allowing 24 hits, seven earned runs and striking out 60 in 47 innings.

Jon Shaw was 3-1 with a 4.24 ERA, and Volinski was 1-0 with a 0.00 ERA in his lone appearance.

Ten seniors

Graduation will hit the Golden Warriors hard as Shepard, Volinski, Marshall, Mark Matos, Chris Caverly, Marty DeFrancisco, Chris Krey, Jon Almon, Adam Perry and Andy Timko have all played their last high school game.

MIAA TOURNAMENT PRELIMINARY ROUND Andover 12 Beverly 9

Maglio was able to save Kevin Shepard for top seed Lincoln-Sudbury, as the Golden Warriors survived stubborn Beverly by outhitting the host Panthers in the opener.

The locals jumped ahead 2-0 in the top of the first on a leadoff single to center field by Jeff Marshall, an RBI double to right by Jeff Volinski, and back-to-back singles by Chris Hanlon (RBI) and Marty DeFrancisco.

The Panthers tied it in the bottom of the inning on a walk, single and two-run triple by Tom Doyle off AHS starting pitcher Jon Shaw.

Boys, girls tennis teams stayin' alive in the post-season

BOYS TENNIS

After disposing of Somerville 5-0 in the first round, the Andover High boys tennis team vaulted into the Division 1 North semifinals by defeating Middlesex League co-champ and host team Reading 4-1 in a quarterfinal round match Tuesday afternoon at Reading.

Andover left the Reading match with a 16-2 overall record.

All-Conference

Gabe Adams has been voted the Merrimack Valley Conference Player of the Year in boys tennis.

MVC champ Andover also grabbed all but one of the remaining spots on the 2001 All-Conference Team.

Andy Chiaraluce and Rich Roda were selected at second and third singles, respectively, while Steve Hibino and Jason Lynn are the first doubles team and James Kim and Avi Lasser the second doubles team.

Mike Wartman joined John Rich of Central Catholic as co-Coaches of the Year.

MIAA TOURNAMENT FIRST ROUND Andover 5 Somerville 0

The Golden Warriors started the tournament in style with a total domination of visiting Greater Boston League qualifier Somerville.

Andover's three singles players lost only three games while registering straight-set sweeps.

Senior Capt. Gabe Adams drilled Robert Splaine 6-1, 6-0, junior Andy Chiaraluce blitzed Charlie Dorriety 6-0, 6-0 and senior Capt. Rich Roda rocked Chris Callahan 6-0, 6-2.

Roda returned to the lineup after missing the final three regular season matches with an injury.

"It was nice to see Rich back and playing well," said coach Wartman. "He seemed to be at full strength."

At first doubles, senior Capt. Steve Hibino and sophomore Jason Lynn cruised past the Hilltoppers' Steve Tavares and Sid Jah, 6-2, 6-0.

Senior James Kim and freshman Avi Lasser handled Antonio Martin and Josh Kim (no relation to James) with the same 6-2, 6-0 ease.

"Our kids came out focused and played very well," said Wartman.

Somerville completed its season at 11-6 overall.

QUARTERFINAL ROUND Andover 4 Reading 1

"Reading eliminated us from last year's tourney and they returned all three singles and one doubles player from that team," said coach Mike Wartman. "It was a tough matchup for us — but we're glad to get the opportunity to play them again."

The Rockets' first doubles team reached the semifinal round of the North Sectional Individual Championships this spring.

GIRLS TENNIS

After having its Division 1 North Tournament first round match postponed by rain on the original date, the undefeated MVC 1 champion Andover High girls tennis team (19-0) hammered visiting Bishop Fenwick High of Peabody 5-0 Tuesday afternoon at the AHS courts.

All-Conference

Michelle Leahy of Andover and Nicole Rodger of Lowell, who split their two head-to-head matches this spring, have been voted Merrimack Valley Conference co-Players of the Year in girls tennis.

Also named to the 2001 All-Conference Team from Division 1 champ AHS were freshman Marsha Mogie with a third singles and the tandem of Elizabeth Magner and Carolyn Pierce at first doubles.

Erin Zuma was selected to the MVC All-Star Team at second singles.

AHS ROUNDUP

BASEBALL

Andover took the lead for good with three runs in the third, stringing together singles by Shepard, Chris Caverly, Hanlon (infield) and Sean Smith.

DeFrancisco also reached on an error by the first baseman, keeping the inning alive, although he was later thrown out at third by the centerfielder on Smith's base hit.

The lead jumped to 9-2 in the top of the fourth. Mark Matos and Marshall led the inning with consecutive singles. Shepard and Volinski followed with run-scoring doubles to right-center, and Volinski scored the fourth run of the inning on a sac-fly to left by Caverly.

The Panthers battled back with three runs in the fourth and two in the sixth, chasing Shaw and trimming the deficit to 9-7.

Andover countered with a game-winning three-run rally with two outs in the seventh.

After the first two batters were retired, Ross Trainor reached on an infield error to get things started. AHS took full advantage of the miscue when Matos beat out an infield hit to short, Marshall ripped an RBI single to right, Shepard was hit by a pitch to load the bases, and Volinski lashed a two-run opposite-field single to left.

Pesky Beverly (10-11), the Northeastern Conference fourth-place finisher, refused to go quietly and scored twice in the seventh to chase relief pitcher Matos and close within 12-9.

Junior righthander Brian Daley put out the fire and earned the save with a clutch relief stint, pitching 2 1/3 innings of hitless ball.

With two runs in and two runners aboard in the bottom of the seventh, he got the final out on a grounder to shortstop Hanlon.

Daley hit the first batter in the eighth — but then picked him off — and got the next two on a strikeout and fly ball to leftfielder Caverly.

He protected the three-run cushion in the ninth with a flyout to center, groundout to short and game-ending strikeout.

Volinski finished with three hits, five RBI and two runs scored, while Marshall added three singles, one ribbie and three runs scored.

Deuces were wild for Shepard with two hits, two RBI and two runs, and contributing two safeties and an RBI each to the 16-hit assault were Caverly and Hanlon.

Matos had two hits and scored twice. Smith one hit, two RBI and DeFrancisco one hit.

Matos notched his second pitching victory and Daley his first save.

Defensively, the infield played well as second baseman Smith had three assists and three putouts, shortstop Hanlon three assists, third baseman Matos and DeFrancisco three assists each, and first baseman Shepard two assists, 12 putouts.

Marshall also made a diving catch in center field and Trainor played a strong game behind the plate.

FIRST ROUND
Lincoln-Sudbury 3
Andover 2

Lefthander Kevin Shepard (4-3) and L-S sophomore Brian Donahue (5-1) hooked up in a superb pitcher's duel.

Shepard yielded six hits, fanning six and walking four, while Donahue allowed seven hits while whiffing nine and walking two.

Dual County League champ Lincoln-Sudbury (19-3) did all its damage early, scoring two runs in the first and adding the eventual game-winner in the bottom of the second.

In the L-S first, leadoff batter Adam Taranto belted a double over the centerfielder's head and took third on a single by Ryan Rooney.

Evan Weiss' infield hit brought home the first run, and Scott Babineau rescued Rooney with a sac-fly to right field.

In the second, Brendan Hayden launched a leadoff home run over the right field fence to make it 3-0.

Shepard settled down nicely after the dinger, allowing just two hits and pitching shutout ball the rest of the way.

But the Golden Warriors had early trouble with Donahue, who retired the first 10 batters he faced including four strikeouts.

Shepard broke up the perfect game with one out in the fourth, hammering his second homer of the season and the team's fifth.

Volinski followed with a single, stole second and raced to third on the catcher's overthrow.

Caverly walked and Chris Hanlon touched the suddenly-vulnerable Donahue with a long RBI double to straightaway center field that hit three-quarters of the way up the fence.

The smash missed being a go-ahead three-run homer by about three feet.

Donahue regained his composure just in time, escaping the jam on a pop out to third and grounder to short that left two runners in scoring position at second and third.

That was the only bad inning for the L-S sophomore, who blanked AHS on four singles over the final five innings.

The Golden Warriors were unable to cash in on a serious threat in the seventh.

DH Marty DeFrancisco drew a one-out walk and Sean Smith singled to left, but DeFrancisco was thrown out trying to advance to third after Rooney bobbled the ball.

Sophomore Jason White followed with a single to right field that would have plated the tying run. Donahue then fanned the next batter with runners at second and third to end the inning.

Volinski spanked a two-out single in the eighth but was left stranded.

The season ended when the locals went down 1-2-3 in the ninth on a grounder to third and two strikeouts, as Donahue finished with a flourish.

The hot-hitting Volinski went 3-for-4, while Taranto and Hayden had two hits each for L-S. Taranto rapped two doubles and reached base four straight times (two walks).

Shepard had five assists from the mound.

SOFTBALL

Winning two Division 1 North Tournament games for the first time in years, the Andover High softball team earned a berth against Middlesex League power Woburn in the quarterfinals.

Taking advantage of a fortuitous tourney draw, the 18th-seed Lady Warriors handled MVC rival Methuen 8-2 in the preliminary round and Boston Latin Academy 10-2 in the first round.

Unfortunately, Woburn ended the locals' dreams of a North title with a tight 2-1 victory in the quarters on Tuesday afternoon at Library Park in Woburn.

That gave AHS, which finished the regular season on a roll, six wins in its final eight games and a winning 12-11 record this spring.

"I'm not disappointed with our season at all — but Woburn was a disappointing loss," said AHS head coach Steph Ragucci. "Our girls never gave up and we went a lot further than a lot of other teams did this spring."

"For a No. 18 tournament seed we did ourselves proud. Winning 12 games — and knocking off the No. 2 seed in the tourney — is nothing to sneeze about."

Six seniors

The Lady Warriors graduate six seniors from this tea: Lisa Tisbert, Taylor Traub, Kerri Axelrod, Katie Mullen, Jess Minor and Tyina Cuevas.

Stat leaders

Capt. Lisa Tisbert was the top hitter on the team with an impressive .446 average on 33-for-74. She also has 18 RBI and one home run.

Andrea Manners finished at .351 with 26 hits in 74 at-bats. Manners has 14 RBI.

Taylor Traub batted .301 on 25-for-83, and Shannon Sciolla is tied for the team lead in RBI with 18.

MIAA TOURNAMENT
PRELIMINARY ROUND
Andover 8
Methuen 2

The Lady Warriors, beating Methuen for the third time this season (11-4 and 4-3 in eight innings), took a 2-0 lead in the top of the first and broke a 2-2 tie with a six-run outburst in the third.

Pitcher Kaitlin Haugh authored a crisp complete-game four-hitter, blanking the Rangers over the final six innings.

In the first inning, Kerri Axelrod was hit by a pitch, Lisa Tisbert and Andrea Manners both walked, and the runs scored on a throwing error and passed ball.

The locals batted around in the pivotal third inning, sending 12 hitters to the plate and breaking Methuen's spirit.

Axelrod once again launched the rally with a single and she quickly stole second. Tisbert was hit by a pitch, Manners ripped an RBI single and Shannon Sciolla walked to load the bases.

Dana Medaglio bounced into a fielder's choice, with Tisbert nailed at the plate, but on Kara Spang's infield grounder Manners beat the throw home.

Liz Pallotta followed with her first varsity hit, looping an RBI single over the shortstop's head.

Taylor Traub walked, and the big inning was capped by consecutive RBI singles to left field by Axelrod and Tisbert.

The balanced nine-hit AHS attack featured safeties by eight different players.

Axelrod was the only player on either team with two hits, while solo safeties were contributed by Traub, MVC 2 Player of the Year Tisbert, Manners, Medaglio, Spang, Pallotta and Jackie Collins.

Axelrod also scored twice while Tisbert, Manners, Sciolla, Medaglio, Spang and Pallotta each crossed the plate once.

Collecting an RBI each were Tisbert, Spang, Traub, Manners, Axelrod and Pallotta.

"You never know what to expect when you play Methuen," said coach Ragucci. "We had beaten them twice — once easily and the other time in eight innings — and I was worried about playing them a third time."

"But our girls were ready. We got up on them early and we got the job done."

"Katie (Haugh) continued to be rock-steady on the mound. She has kept us in every game this season."

FIRST ROUND
Andover 10
Boston Latin Academy 2

Playing BLA for the first time, sizzling Andover took a 3-0 lead in the third and erupted for its second six-run inning of the tourney in the fourth.

"I liked our draw right from the beginning," said coach Ragucci. "Even though I hadn't seen Latin Academy play, I was confident if we got past Methuen we could beat them because we play a much tougher schedule."

"Of course, if you're not careful you can always lose to a weaker team. But we played good defense. We made the routine plays. We hit the ball often and hard — and Katie shut them down."

Kaitlin Haugh tossed her second consecutive four-hit tourney gem, struck out a season-high nine and kept Latin Academy off the board until the sixth when the host team pushed across both its runs at Playstead Park adjacent to the Franklin Park Zoo in Jamaica Plain.

AHS once again jumped ahead 2-0 in the top of the first when Taylor Traub singled to left, Kerri Axelrod singled to right and both eventually scooted across on passed balls.

In the third Axelrod walked, Lisa Tisbert singled to center, Andrea Manners singled to load the bases, and Shannon Sciolla roped an RBI single to left.

Once again 12 batters paraded to the plate in a six-run fourth-inning explosion that boosted the lead to 9-0.

Liz Pallotta walked, stole second and scored on Traub's one-out RBI single. Axelrod singled to center, and Tisbert drilled a two-run gap-shot triple to left-center.

Manners followed with another triple down the right field line, chasing home Tisbert, and Sciolla slapped an RBI single.

AHS ROUNDUP

SOFTBALL

Dana Medaglio singled, Pallotta took a circuitous route to first base on a dropped third strike, and Jackie Collins forced home the final run of the inning with a walk.

In the fifth Axelrod reached on an error, took second on Tisbert's fielder's choice and scored the last Andover run on a single to center by Sciolla.

The locals unleashed a 13-hit barrage, led by Sciolla who went 3-for-4 while driving home two runs and scoring one.

Tisbert drilled a pair of hits, including the triple, scored twice and drove in three runs.

The top-of-the-order tablesetters continued white-hot, as leadoff batter Traub laced two hits and scored twice while No. 2 Axelrod had a pair of safeties and scored three runs.

Manners delivered two hits, an RBI and scored once, while rounding out the attack with a safety each were Medaglio and Kara Spang.

The first seven batters in the AHS lineup had at least one hit apiece.

QUARTERFINAL ROUND

Woburn 2

Andover 1

Woburn figured to present a stiff test for the locals, as the Tanners entered with an 18-3 overall record that included a third-place finish in the Middlesex League and a first-round tourney win over Framingham.

The game also had a little extra meaning for coach Ragucci, a Woburn High graduate who played softball and basketball for the Tanners in the late 1980's.

"We just had too much Michelle Greene," said Ragucci, praising the Tanners' flamethrowing pitcher after the game. "She throws hard and she shut us down pretty well."

Ace pitcher Greene fired a complete-game one-hitter and struck out 11.

She didn't walk a batter — but she did plunk Lisa Tisbert and Shannon Sciolla with fastballs. Tisbert was hit in the helmet and Sciolla near the elbow.

Kaitlin Haugh battled Greene all the way, closing with a six-hitter, three strikeouts and only two walks.

Andover scored its only run — and grabbed a 1-0 lead — in the top of the first when jittery Woburn committed two infield errors.

Taylor Traub reached second base on the first bobble, and she scored moments later when Tisbert's bouncer to short resulted in a throwing error.

Woburn loaded the bases in the bottom of the first on a one-out bunt single, a bloop single and a walk. The run scored when a grounder by Krista D'Agostino went off the pitcher's glove.

The Tanners notched the winning run in the third when Amy Sullivan singled, pinchrunner Jessica Buttarolo stole second, and with two outs the pesky D'Agostino delivered an RBI Texas League single to right field.

The lone hit for Andover was a fifth-inning leadoff double by Dana Medaglio. Kara Spang bunted pinchrunner Jess Lieder to third, but Greene fanned the next two batters to escape the jam.

Sciolla was hit by a pitch in the seventh to put the tying run aboard, but Woburn rightfielder Amy Smith made a shoestring catch to squash the Lady Warriors' final bid.

"We followed the same path Billerica did in the North last year," said Ragucci. "They beat an MVC team, us (1-0), in the preliminary round and then beat Latin Academy in the first round. The difference is they beat Woburn in the quarters and we fell just short."

GIRLS LACROSSE

The Andover High girls lacrosse team, facing an uphill MIAA Tournament battle after drawing established power Lincoln-Sudbury in its North Sectional first-round game, dropped a lopsided 17-3 season-ending decision to the Warriors on Tuesday afternoon.

In the regular season finale, Diana Crawford and Amanda Gallant combined for five goals as AHS edged North League rival Billerica 9-8 at the Doherty Middle School field.

First-year team AHS finished the season with an impressive 9-7-2 overall record including 4-2-2 in its last eight games.

Scoring leaders

Not including the tourney game, Diana Crawford was the team leader in goals and total points with 38 goals and five assists for 43 points.

Amanda Gallant had 30 goals and six assists, Grace Farnham 29 goals and two assists, Demorie Crawford nine goals and a team-high 18 assists, and Katie Stewart 16 goals, five assists.

REGULAR SEASON

Andover 9

Billerica 8

The Lady Warriors jumped ahead 5-0 early, built a 6-2 halftime lead and maintained a 9-5 advantage with three minutes left before BMHS mounted a furious late charge that fell one goal short.

"We controlled the game until the last few minutes — and we ended up holding on for dear life," said coach Polley.

"Our girls are still learning how to win — and it was nice that we pulled this one out. Billerica scored its final goal with 1:12 to play, and Vivian (goaltender Crossley) made a spectacular save with about 30 seconds left to preserve the win," added Polley.

Diana Crawford led the attack with a hat trick and one assist, while Amanda Gallant and Emily Shaer had two goals each and Gallant added two assists.

Ashley Troutman and Katie Stewart also had a goal apiece, Demorie Crawford and Grace Farnham one assist each, and Crossley finished with 11 saves.

Defensive standouts for the locals were senior midfielder Jill Mann and sophomore speedster Ashley Hegarty.

Courtney Duggan, Brenna Newfell, Ashley Martell and Rachel Burke made it interesting with two goals each for MIAA Tournament qualifier Billerica (10-7 record).

Indians' goaltender Rachel Barron made 18 saves.

The victory avenged a 7-6 loss at BMHS on May 8.

BOYS LACROSSE

A disastrous first half led to a 10-7 loss to Needham, as the Andover High boys lacrosse team wrapped up its third season by being bounced from the MIAA Division 1 East Tournament in the first round.

The loss left the Golden Warriors with a 10-8 overall record.

Scoring leaders

Troy Lieberman led the team in total points with 19 goals and 18 assists for 37 points.

Jeff Ahern had 29 points, including a team-high 26 goals, while Nate Stoetzel finished with 17 goals, 10 assists for 27 points.

Eleven seniors

The Andover laxmen graduate 11 seniors from the current squad.

MIAA TOURNAMENT

FIRST ROUND

Needham 10

Andover 7

Perhaps nervous at the outset, the Golden Warriors fell behind 5-1 after one quarter and 9-2 at the half.

AHS came back to outscore the Rockets (15-3) by an impressive 5-1 margin in the final two periods, holding the host team scoreless in the final quarter, but the deficit was too much to overcome.

Junior attack Troy Lieberman and senior attack Nate Stoetzel netted two goals apiece for the locals, while single tallies were added by Mike Hass, Jeff Ahern and Greg Beck.

Lieberman, Stoetzel and Ahern set up one goal each, and senior Capt. Chris Cataldo halted 14 of the 24 shots Needham put on net.

Defensive standouts in the second half were Capt. Jim Hale and fellow seniors Jon Maloney and Erik Martin.

Owner Stan Ashdown with Barbara Mozzioli's dog Sonny

All Breed Dog Grooming

Since relocating All Breed Dog Grooming to North Reading near the Andover town line last fall, Stan Ashdown has been very pleased with the enthusiastic reception he has received from Andover residents. It is not surprising that he has built a loyal clientele so quickly. His 20 years' experience as a dog groomer and his excellent rapport with dogs of all temperaments as well as with their owners is a sure recipe for success.

Now that his business is well established in its new location, Stan is ready to resume teaching. Since 1985 he has been offering an opportunity for one-on-one instruction to motivated, committed people. Students work with him about 27 hours a week for 4-6 months, learning at a pace tailored to their individual needs. Stan himself trained under the auspices of a professional groomer, and he believes that is the most effective way to learn.

Stan's philosophy of teaching mirrors the strong values he holds in his profession. He emphasizes that solid skills need to come ahead of speed. For instance, scissoring is the hardest thing to do in grooming. Stan first learned the technique as a barber and takes pride in producing a smooth transition between long hair and short hair. He says, "I want each dog to be an advertisement of my skill. If you learn a skill like scissoring right the first time, then it's just a matter of speed and that comes with confidence. It is possible to have a good income as a groomer without putting the cash register ahead of ability. I find it very gratifying to see my students learn proper techniques and then go on to a successful career in grooming."

To inquire about instruction and to make appointments, call (978) 664-0007 between 7a.m. and 3p.m. or after 6p.m. All Breed Dog Grooming is located at 320 Main St. (Rte. 28), North Reading, 1/4 mile past the town line, just beyond National Tile.

■ SANBORN SCHOOL

"The concept of giving and charity is so important to instill in children at a young age," said Steven Jankauskas, interim principal at Sanborn. "We are proud of our student council members who have been very involved this year from raising turkeys during Thanksgiving to donating hundreds of pairs of eyeglasses to the blind and now to giving sporting equipment to children who are in need."

The Sanborn Student Council is made up of a rotating group of selected students in grades 4 and 5 and is overseen by three school parents.

Oh most beautiful flower of Mount Carmel, fruitful vine, Splendor of heaven, blessed Mother of the Son of God. Immaculate Virgin assist me in this, my necessity. Oh star of the sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh holy Mary Mother of God, queen of Heaven and earth. I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart, succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your call. Oh show me herein you are my mother, oh Mary conceived with out sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3 times). Holy Mary I place this cause in your hands. (3 times). Sweet Mother I pray for this cause in your hands. (3 times). Holy Spirit resolve all my problems, light all roads so that I can attain my goal. You gave me the divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances of my life, you are with me. I want this short prayer to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you even in spite of material things. I wish to be with you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy towards me and mine. (The person must say this prayer on three consecutive days. After three days the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the prayer is granted). M.E.M.
